Probe Ordered On Price Levels

House-Senate Committee Set

OTTAWA (CP)—The government gave formal notice today that it proposes appointment of a joint Senate-Commons committee on price stability, incomes and employment.

The notice on the Commons order paper, for consideration Wednesday, was in the name of Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford. Before entering the cabinet, Mr. Basford was joint chairman of a similar committee which reported in 1967 after hearings across the country on consumer prices.

Mr. Basford mentioned the inquiry proposal plan in the Commons Monday as the Liberal government fought off a Conservative attack on its consumer affairs policies.

Basford had indicated he did not favor government-imposed price control of beef prices. He blamed recent highly publicized beef price increases on public demand for high-priced cuts. (See page 22.)

BASFORD
. . . pressure builds up

The motion calls for the committee to consider reports from the recently-established prices and incomes commission headed by Dr. John H. Young of the University of British Columbia. It is to have power to sit when Parliament is adjourned.

The Senate is to be asked to join with the Commons on the project. Senator David Croll (L—Ontario) was joint chairman with Mr. Basford of the last prices committee.

HOLD EXTRA SITTINGS

This morning, the Commons embarked on the first of a set of extra sittings aimed at clearing the legislative decks for a scheduled summer adjournment June 27.

In quick time, it approved amendments to the National Housing Act before turning to other government business. The NHA amendments now go to the Senate.

Three extra hours were provided today, all on government legislation, by sitting 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. A similar move is due Thursday. Another extra three hours are planned Wednesday and one on Friday.

The normal sitting today was scheduled for 2 p.m. with the usual opening business and oral question period followed by an NDP challenge to the government's Western farm program.

On Monday, Mr. Basford countered opposition criticism of the government consumer affairs policies with a review of his department's activities, a promise to amend the Combines Investigation Act as soon as a study is received from the Economic Council of Canada and an appeal to housewives to vary their diet.

M-B SAWMILLS PLAN PRODUCTION CUTBACKS

MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., a giant in the British Columbia forest industry, Tuesday announced production cutbacks at five sawmill operations on the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island.

A spokesman for the company said the third or "graveyard" shift will be stopped during July and August. The stoppage was due to the "sharply reduced" demand for lumber and a "continuing shortage of logs."

Affected are the Canadian White Pine Sawmill Division in Vancouver, New Westminster Sawmill Division, Chemainus Sawmill Division and Somass and Alberni Pacific Sawmill division in Port Alberni.

'We Did Everything But Land on Moon'

The three Apollo 10 astronauts tell their own stories today for the first time of their orbit around the moon in this special series of articles.

By THOMAS STAFFORD
(Copyright, Time, 1969)

We whooshed out of the blackness behind the moon and suddenly could see it there. We felt great.

We were having a ball. While we were still bubbling over—and trying to get our heads out of the windows long enough to get some work done—John came out with a phrase which broke us all up: "Well, now that we're here, what do we do?"

For a complex mission, our overall mission objective was pretty simple: do everything the moon-landing crew will do except land.

Our flight had some cliff-hangers along the way, of course. One of the first was that snowstorm we had of fiberglass insulation which had burst out of its covering when we pressurized the lunar module, Snoopy.

I didn't know how bad it was until after Gene went into Snoopy to activate the systems. I left my couch to help out and poked my head into Snoopy and looked at Gene. He had bits of white insulation stuck to his eyebrows, his eyes, his nostrils, his hair, his ears, and I just burst out laughing.

I remember when I was a boy in Weatherford, Okla., I used to go down to poultry house there once in a while and watch. On plucking day there's be chicken feathers all over the place, flying around in the air and people coughing and wheezing. I'd forgotten all about it until I saw old Gene in there.

Color Television

I floated back into command module, Charlie Brown, and got a suit hose, which provides air circulation to our suits. It has an inlet and outlet with a screen over the inlet as a filter, and I used it like a vacuum cleaner.

The fiberglass particles would form like big snowballs on the end of the hose and I'd pick them off and stow them in bags. It would have been funny on television.

I fought hard and long to get that high-resolution color television camera on board. We had black and white on board before, but it didn't produce the total grandeur in spectrum that we had all seen in space.

I knew what was up there—the wonderful view—I really wanted to show it and share it because it belongs to all people, and I have been happy to learn that they appreciate it.

We had a lot of important things to do in lunar orbit, but one of the crucial jobs was to evaluate the gravitational potential. The moon's pull does some funny things, and we want to know a lot more about it. For one thing, it will distort a spacecraft's natural orbit.

Abnormal Pull

Charlie Brown went into a perfect circular orbit 60 miles above the moon, and 61 hours later that circle had deteriorated to an apogee of 70 miles and a perigee of 50 miles without firing any of the engines at all.

Then there is the effect of "mascons" or mass concentrations—areas of extreme density which exercise a stronger gravitational pull than normal. Their effect actually is noticeable even here on earth. The igneous mass of the island of Puerto Rico exercises a stronger pull than the waters surrounding it, and some of our satellites get their orbits perturbed slightly when they pass over the island.

The moon is a much smaller mass than the earth, so the effect of the concentrations there is more noticeable.

Very Low Passes

On both of our very low passes across the moon's surface, when we were down to about 47,000 feet (less than nine miles), we were suddenly pulled downward, and our speed accelerated by about 20 feet per second. Once we had passed over these dense areas we went back up again.

We were going so fast—about 4,000 miles an hour—that the centrifugal force of our flight compensated for the gravitational pull and we were actually unaware of the physical distortion of our orbit. But it showed up clearly in the flight data recorded on earth by telemetry. It didn't bother us, but if you were trying to land a lunar module, and one of those mascon areas grabbed you, you could rip your britches.

It's difficult to convey just what a light-weight structure the lunar module really is. Because it's built for lunar work only it's just a thin shell, and every little rocket thrust or engine action shakes it up and makes a terrific noise.

Ever since I've been in the space program, seven years now, people have been trying to find a way to shave. I'd hate to think how much time has

Oak Bay Secrecy Continues

By PAT DUFOUR

Oak Bay council "does a disservice to every Oak Bay taxpayer" every time it holds a secret meeting, said the president of the municipality's ratepayers' association today.

Con Watling made the statement to the Times after reporters were refused admittance to a Monday night meeting about apparent discrepancies in 1969 assessments.

The council plans another secret session tonight and Ald. Ian Horne says it should not be allowed to happen.

Reporters and public are barred when council goes into what is called committee of the whole.

"Under the Municipal Act," said Horne, "meetings can only be held in camera when it is in the best public interest.

"A committee as a whole is not a secret meeting. It only changes the parliamentary rules to allow for free discussion, requiring no seconders.

"I am against this business of secret meetings. When I object I'm told that this is the way Oak Bay has operated for the past 20 years. Very cosy."

OLD POLICY

Mayor Fred Hawes said today it "had been the policy long before my time that committees as a whole were held in private."

He said that while Victoria and Saanich councils opened their committee meetings to the press he understood that "Esquimalt did much of its work in camera."

He agreed to take the matter of secret meetings up with council, adding:

"You'll probably have a more

TRUDEAU CRITICIZES CANCELLATION

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, a target last year during the June 24 St. Jean Baptiste Day riot in Montreal, criticized Monday events surrounding the cancellation of the 1969 event at Sherbrooke, Que.

It is wrong that "a small group which chooses to throw bombs" has the power to change the minds of elected officials, he said after learning of the decision to cancel.

Accountant Testifies On Deals

VANCOUVER (CP) — An accountant testified Monday that money from an adviser's trust account for a mutual fund was paid into the personal trust account of A. G. Duncan Crux, Vancouver lawyer-financier.

Alan Kemp-Gee was testifying at a hearing collecting evidence to be sent to officials in the Bahamas to support British Columbia's attempt to have Crux extradited so he can go on trial here.

Crux, former president of Commonwealth Trust Co., which headed the group, faces 24 charges of fraud and theft involving about $1,000,000. He is free on $75,000 bail in Nassau.

Mr. Kemp-Gee, appearing before Magistrate Harvey Sedgewick, spent Monday testifying about dealings of the mutual funds, Diversified A and B, managed by Diversified Income Securities Ltd. a Commonwealth Group company.

Mr. Kemp-Gee said that from January, 1962, to July, 1965, trustees of one of the funds paid out $13,750 listed for advisory board fees—of which $1,750 went into the Crux general account.

The balance of $12,000 went into an advisory board trust account. Mr. Kemp-Gee said payments from the trust account included $1,350 to Crux's personal trust account.

He said $1,150 was paid to the late Prof. Leslie Wong of University of B.C., an adviser; $250 went to buy shares for investment dealer Vincent Williams, another adviser, and $72.50 was credited to the late John V. Fisher, another adviser and one-time deputy finance minister of B.C.

Mr. Kemp-Gee said he couldn't trace one $2,000 sum.

Satan or Santa? Pompidou Enigma

By DONALD H. LOUCHHEIM
The Washington Post

PARIS—During a heated national assembly debate last year, one of Georges Pompidou's opponents told the then-premier that "with your sardonic smile and your thick eyebrows, you remind me of the devil".

In his successful campaign for the French presidency, Pompidou trimmed his bushy black eyebrows. And, as one disgruntled opponent complained, he came across not as Satan but as Santa Claus.

Somewhere between these two flippant caricatures is the real Georges Pompidou, 57, former professor, former banker, former premier, newly-elected second president of France's Fifth Republic.

To his admirers, Pompideau is tough, firm, pragmatic, self-confident and thoughtful. To his detractors, these same characteristics have a pejorative connotation — ruthless, a uthoritarian, opportunistic, arrogant and calculating.

Remains Enigma

Perhaps surprisingly, few Frenchmen would be able to say with any conviction which portrait of their new chief executive is more fitting.

For despite his more than six-year term as de Gaulle's prime minister, despite his accepted status during the past year as the aging general's heir-apparent, despite his energetic campaign speeches, Georges Pompidou still remains an enigma to most of his countrymen. Nor is there any certainty about what policies he will pursue as president.

His long service as De Gaulle's deputy—Pompidou's term as premier set a 20th century record in France—offers few clues. Although he campaigned as a guarantor of the general's legacy, he is viewed with suspicion by many of De Gaulle's most ardent supporters.

Major Mystery

Indeed, Pompidou's relationship with De Gaulle is one of the major mysteries of the new president's meteoric political career. De Gaulle singlehandedly created Pompidou as a political figure, even seemed to make him his "Dauphin," then apparently tried to destroy him at the very height of his power and prestige.

Almost any informed Frenchman could tick off such a list of Pompideau's tastes and hobbies. But is he favorable to Britain's entry in the Common Market? Will he lift or modify the French arms embargo in Israel? Will he make France a participant in new international monetary arrangements? Will he permit the free play of democracy in France? Will he cut back the French nuclear force? Will he

Britain Planning New ECM Bid

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Britain is summoning home envoys from key continental countries to appraise policy and tactics for a new bid to win entry into the European Common Market, informants said today.

The move came after Prime Minister Wilson signalled President-elect Georges Pompidou of France that Britain is ready to begin the process of British-French reconciliation. London hopes Charles de Gaulle's successor will remove the French veto on British entry.

Political sources said Wilson is likely to follow up his offer with a suggestion to meet Pompidou this summer, but only if Christopher Soames, Britain's ambassador to France, judges it will prove productive.

The envoys being summoned home are said to include those from the six Common Market capitals and possibly from some of the key member countries in the European Free Trade Association.

Berger Attacks New Agency As Front for Patronage

A new provincial agency to assist the unemployed is really camouflage for a Social Credit manoeuvre to "dole out patronage with $50,000 of the taxpayers' money," opposition leader Tom Berger charged Monday.

Berger was attacking the mysterious Provincial Alliance of Businessmen, and the minister without portfolio who set up the agency, P. A. Gaglardi.

The Alliance has a $50,000 operating budget, at least three employees and offices in Victoria, Vancouver and Kamloops.

Its aim, according to Gaglardi, is to attack unemployment in British Columbia with industrial leaders and the government co-operating to find jobs for the hard-core unemployed.

UNNAMED MEMBERS

"The government should come clean and tell us who the PAB are," said Berger.

Berger said two of three managers of alliance offices already set up are well known Socreds. He was referring to Ron Price in Victoria and Douglas Stewart, Gaglardi's former campaign chairman, in the Kamloops office.

'NOT A FRONT'

"We need an organization to find jobs for people, but it should be the department of labor, not a Socred front alliance."

Berger also slammed Gaglardi, calling him a "discredited minister whose major claim to fame is his ability to look after his political friends."

Gaglardi and Premier W. A. C. Bennett denied Monday there was any patronage involved in the appointments thus far.

U.S. Postal Rate Raise Warned

WASHINGTON (WP) — The postmaster-general told Congress Monday it had better be ready to vote for a 10 to 11 cent first-class stamp if it okays an extra pay raise this year for his workers.

Winton M. Blount calmly warned of the jump in first-class postage (now six cents) as hearing began on a new postal pay bill before the House Compensation Subcommittee.

The former Alabama contractor said that the first-class stamp must be raised a penny anyhow, just to finance the coming July pay raise. And, in response to a question from Rep. Albert W. Johnson (R—Pa.), who did the arithmetic, Blount said he'd be required to "seek an increase" of four to five cents, if Congress authorized a 16.5 per cent pay boost for the nation's 740,000 mailmen.

He emphasized, however, that his department is not working on a new rate package at this time.

CNR Accused Of 'Vicious' Contract

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of contractors accused the Canadian National Railways today of unfairly holding them to the letter of a "vicious" contract clause, resulting in heavy financial loss and bankruptcy.

They appealed to the Commons transport committee to recommend that the federal cabinet establish a public inquiry into their plight arising out of construction of the Great Slave Lake railway in 1962 and 1963.

After hearing three of five contractors, several Liberal and Progressive Conservative MPs voiced support for a motion introduced by Albert Bruce Douglas (L — Assiniboia) calling for a public inquiry.

YOU'LL PAY, REPORTER TOLD

"You've done enough damage—and you'll pay for it," Oak Bay mayor Fred Hawes told Times reporter Pat Dufour when he ordered she and a Colonist reporter to leave a secret meeting called on assessment disparities Monday.

The mayor was referring to a story in Monday's Times in which Ald. G. Scott Wallace condemned the council's practice of holding secret meetings on important issues.

Monday's meeting took place after the regular council session with Oak Bay assessor, Desmond Wyatt, and Reginald Sampson of the provincial assessor's department present.

The confrontation took place in the committee room as the two reporters asked permission to report the proceedings.

Members of the council were already seated at the table.

Asked when the press could expect to be informed of the meeting's findings, the mayor said that these would be brought out at the next council meeting.

The next meeting is Monday, June 30.

OTTAWA ATTITUDE CALLED TOO NARROW

OTTAWA (CP)—Ottawa's civic administration looks at language and cultural matters from the standpoint of an Ontario municipality, rather than of a national capital, the royal commission on bilingualism and bi-culturalism said today.

In a special research study, the commission says it has been unable to discover any "significant sentiment" that Ottawa's position as the nation's capital should have any bearing on language policy at city hall.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Every kind of weather has its special disadvantages. In most areas of the North American continent there are few bugs in cold weather. Summer weather is weather for bugs in our temperate climate. In summer we have mosquitoes almost every place, from the smaller ones near the Mexican border to the jet-like giants that lurk, even in the daytime, beneath the trees in Montana and Alberta.

Bugs come with the rain, especially when the rain collects in pools in damp places that never dry out. Gnats, flies, beetles, moths and the beauteous butterflies are summer insects, and most of them are annoying. The heat and dampness of summer speed up the birth cycles of bugs. A wet summer will plague us with pesky things that bite and buzz.

Although malaria is pretty well gone from most of the regions of the United States, there was a time when hot and damp weather helped the malarial mosquito to spread it.

...OAK BAY

Asked if this meant that he would not run for office next year, he parried with "I haven't said I would."

Desmond Wyatt, Oak Bay assessor, who attended the meeting with Reginald Sampson, representative from the provincial assessor's office, said today the press should have been admitted.

"All we did was discuss the basis for assessment."

Ald. G. Scott Wallace, another opponent of the secret meetings, described the session, which ended after midnight as a "meeting of contradictions."

APARTMENTS DOWN

He said that, while the mayor and other members of council had repeatedly said the building of apartment blocks in the municipality would help decrease the single homeowner's tax burden, apartment developers were among those that had assessment decreases.

"Out of 68 apartment complexes, 24 of them have had a decrease in land assessment, some of them on Beach Drive. No one is going to tell me that the market value of property on Beach Drive has gone down that much."

Wyatt, asked about this, admitted "I didn't have time this year to go into as fine details on apartment assessment as I would have liked. I'm going to make a further study for next year."

He said the assessment of apartments and some single-family homes had been lowered in order to be able to bring properties in areas where market values have skyrocketed up to a more realistic figure.

Monday's meeting was called after several taxpayers appealed assessment jumps ranging from 35 to 70 per cent.

Wyatt said although the law allows assessments to be one half of the market value, Oak Bay assessments were readjusted this year to bring the average assessment to 34.36 per cent of the market value.

Wallace, in the council meeting that preceded the secret session, was defeated when he tried to move that council require the court of revision meet after the mill rate had been struck, so the taxpayer would have a clear picutre of what his tax bill would be.

OBVIOUS INJUSTICE

Wallace said today that homeowners had been at a disadvantage when they appealed their increased assessment before the board last February.

"From the figures we heard last night it was obvious what a miscarriage of justice it was when they were asked by the board chairman 'Would you sell your house for twice the assessed value?'"

Both he and Horne said today that council would reconsider assessments of taxpayers who appealed during the last few weeks.

If council felt the increases were unfair, the appeals would be referred to the Oak Bay assessor.

In order to get a new hearing the assessor would have to admit making "a manifest error".

Wallace told of one homeowner who had a great deal of land surrounding his home. The land had been assessed on its value if it were subdivided.

"This is all wrong".

He said that the Oak Bay assessor had revalued the 18 districts in the municipality "by the letter of the book, without any regard for people as human beings.

DECENT BREAK

"He made the complete jump in a single year when it should have been spread over two or three years in order to give people a decent break."

He said Wyatt and Sampson "kept telling us we were talking like politicians, while they were talking like technicians."

"We keep spending large sums every year on projects which, if we can't afford them, we should take a second look at. We are permitted to have 24, 26 or 28-foot roads; we build 28-foot ones.

"If we must have the best, widest, biggest and mostest ..... we're bound to get huge tax bills."

Chinese Envoys On Move

By COLIN McCULLOUGH
Special to the Times

PEKING — New Chinese ambassadors to Sweden and Romania have been appointed and will be leaving Peking today it was learned here Monday.

The new ambassador to Sweden is Wang Tung. He served in Chinese embassies in Romania and Albania and was called home during the Cultural Revolution along with many senior Chinese diplomats. Recently he was reported working in the Soviet affairs section of the Chinese foreign ministry.

Chang Hai-Feng, former ambassador to East Germany, is the new ambassador to Romania.

Wang and Chang, who are the ninth and tenth heads of missions to be posted abroad in the last few weeks, are travelling via Shanghai, thus avoiding the shorter Peking-Moscow air link. It is not known whether either ambassador intends to stop over in Paris.

The imminent departure of the ambassador to Sweden has been accompanied by reports in diplomatic circles here that the Chinese may favor Stockholm over Warsaw as the site of any future Sino-American talks. This speculation is probably prompted by the fact that the Chinese have found Stockholm satisfactory for the current discussions with the Canadians on diplomatic recognition.

IMPROVED AIR SYSTEMS PLANNED

WASHINGTON (WP)—President Nixon asked congress Monday to approve a $5 billion program to improve the nation's airports and airways control systems over the next 10 years.

In a special message, the President called for taxes on airways users to pay the major part of the program.

The new levies would include an 8 per cent (instead of the present 5 per cent) tax on tickets in domestic flights; a new tax on 3 dollars on tickets for most international flights originating in the United States; a new tax of 5 per cent on air freight waybills; and an increase from 2 to 9 cents a gallon on all fuels used by private or general aviation.

SHAVEN CYCLISTS CONFUSE WITNESSES

By MORGAN MacGREGOR

CAMPBELL RIVER—Nine cleanly-shaven close cropped defendants appearing in court Monday completely confused witnesses during the preliminary hearing into the motorcyclists' riot here May 10.

The cyclists, all members of Satan's Choice and 101 Knights motorcycle clubs from Vancouver, Powell River, Nanaimo, and Campbell River are charged with inciting a riot and damage over $50 following an incident in Discovery Inn beer parlor.

Seven of the men were held for a week in Oakalla and it was during this time that their flowing hair and long beards were clipped.

One witness after the other looked at the defendants grouped among the courtroom spectators and failed to identify them.

Finally the hotel tapman was called to the stand and identified four of the accused.

Crown prosecutor Tony Sarich presented pictures of the accused taken prior to their imprisonment. The three defence lawyers objected to identification by photo.

Sarich said later he expected resistance from the defence if they were used.

Ten witnesses appeared on Monday and it is expected eight more will appear today. The cyclists have posted a total of $19,500 in bail.

SIT-IN APPEALS BY 94 DISMISSED

VANCOUVER (CP) — County Court Judge Fred K. M. Gimmett Monday dismissed appeals against sentences received by 94 persons convicted of causing a disturbance during a sit-in at Simon Fraser University last November.

All were fined $250 or two months in jail for their part in the occupation of the administration building of the suburban Burnaby university.

Judge Grimmett extended the time to pay the fines to November 1. The first time extension was to have ended Thursday.

Shaving Success

This time Deke Slayton, our crew operations chief, said, "How about trying a tube of brushless shaving cream and a standard razor?" So he went to the drugstore and for a total outlay of two dollars and fifty cents came back with these items.

We didn't risk the try until the day before splashdown. I shaved first. I smeared the cream on the left side of my face with my fingers and shaved fine, but then I had to use about four paper towels to get the cream off my hands.

John decided to improve the system. He squeezed the cream right onto his face and didn't even get his hands messed up. That cream trapped all the whiskers in the foam and we just wiped them off onto napkins. It felt great.

This mission stayed with me longer than the others. The first two nights at home I half woke up and reached back, in the dark, to feel for the structural struts of the spacecraft. They didn't feel right. As I gradually came out of deep sleep it would hit me—"It's not metal—it's wood."

Then I realized I wasn't holding a strut at all, but the head of the bed.

Apollo 10 Mission—Beautiful

By JOHN YOUNG

(c) Time, Inc., 1969

Apollo 10 was a team effort—all Apollo missions are—and it was a beautiful thing from start to finish. The Saturn 5 ride is just as impressive as it looks—everyone should try it.

Three thousand tons of us, structure, propellant, upper stages, Snoopy and Charlie Brown, Tom, Gene, and I, lifted by over 3,700 tons of push in those five giant rocket engines.

One of the most immediately pleasant sensations was our ability to get up out of the seats and float around. We hadn't been able to do this in the small Gemini spacecraft. In Apollo you push yourself off the seat with one finger and float all the way to the forward part of the cabin. With another one-finger push you can spin around and go underneath the couches into the stowage area.

Everything is literally at your fingertips. What was a very small three-man vehicle on the launching pad became a great big mansion in weightless flight.

I guess everybody was able to see for the first time, in "real time" (that is, as it was actually happening, when we separated from our booster and turned Charlie Brown around to go pick up Snoopy.

Unrehearsed

At first I was against having television on board because I was afraid it might interfere with out work. But its ability to document problems and to record events in real time soon swung me over. We never interrupted anything we were doing for the television operations.

We didn't rehearse anything, either. Anything we showed you from inside was completely spontaneous.

When we were in lunar orbit and I was operating the camera to show the separation manoeuvre of Charlie Brown and Snoopy, all I had to do was flick one switch to turn on the camera. I would have been too busy to do any more than that.

The television also proved, as I had hoped, to be a valuable engineering device. It showed true lunar surface colors, for one thing, and it documented the troubles; we had with bubbles in our drinking water.

'Too Busy To Even Look At the Moon.'

On the way to the moon we had the attitude of the "stack" — Charlie Brown, Snoopy, and the service-module—set up so that about once an hour the sun would go through the windows, followed by the moon, followed by the earth. Sometimes during the flight it was almost as if you were looking out of the windows and seeing pictures of the earth and moon and sun,—with the earth getting smaller and smaller.

And all the time we were watching we were floating, floating through space and learning to live and work in our own little world.

Sleeping in zero-G is like sleeping on a featherbed. I was the "floater." I guess I didn't really get into bed, I just floated around, asleep. I could sleep anywhere. Sometimes I'd sort of rouse myself and float over to check the instruments, and then I'd go back to sleep.

The most impressive thing to all of us on the first lunar orbit day was the large scale of the relief features on the moon. Many craters had temendous boulder fields around them. Some of those boulders must have been 300 feet high because you could seem them, with the naked eye, from 60 miles away.

Orbital satellite photographs had shown the moon to be all choppd up and beaten on its back side, but our personal observations were that, while the moon is very rugged country, the back is quite weathered and rounded off.

The hills don't appear as rugged as those on the front side, and the general overall condition on the back terrain looks much older than that on the front.

The moon also surprised us because it was colorful. Not just shades of grey, or black and white. It has light tans in it, brilliant whites, and the blackest blacks you ever saw.

The sun's position greatly affected the lunar surface colors. In the middle of the day the surface is so bright you can barely stand to look at it, and the colors tend to be all washed out.

Ancient Creeks?

It really hurts your eyes to look at it. Early in the morning and along toward evening the colors start being more noticeable as the light becomes soft enough so the eye can register them again. We could look down inside the craters and see the walls and floors. I was interested in the long, sinuous rilles, too.

It's assuming authority for me to say this, but those meandering rilles reminded me of dried-up river beds, and couldn't help but wonder if some time long ago fish hadn't been jumping in those creeks.

Naturally we didn't look at the moon all the time. Tom and Gene had to check out Snoopy while I kept Charlie Brown on course around the moon. A lot of people have asked me, "didn't you feel lonely while Tom and Gene were off rambling around in those rocks with Snoopy?"

I was even too busy to look at the moon: I might as well have been on Mars or back on earth in the similator.

I did keep one eye on Snoopy, when I could. When he was 'way out there, 100 miles or more, he looked like an ordinary star in the daytime and a flashing star at night.

Happy Reunion

Then came our rendezvous pattern, in which Tom and Gene coasted out 150 miles in front of Charlie Brown, down to less than nine miles from the lunar surface, up again over the top of Charlie Brown and me by 120 miles, and behind us 350 miles.

One of our happiest moments was when we had rendezvoused and docked, just the way the crew of Apollo II will do it. It was pretty good to see Tom's and Gene's faces as they crawled back through the tunnel.

One can only wonder about the moon — how it got started, and whether its four-billion-year-old face may, in some manner, be a key to the evolution of our own planet and our solar system. The moon fascinates me personally the way Africa once fascinated people, the way any unexplored territory is still fascinating.

In the immediate future it probably will be a geological wonder, a place to study and explore. But one of these days the world must colonize the moon just so our grandchildren (or maybe our children) will have a place to live. I wouldn't tell my kids to go there because I would like my kids to do their own thing.

But I would go, any time, as a colonizer. Sooner than any of us realizes, our world will be providing the technology and people for self-supporting colonies on the moon as well as on other planets in the solar system — and their moons.

Ground Control Accuracy Most Incredible Thing

By EUGENE CERNAN

(C) Time, Inc. 1969

You know, you come a long way, a quarter of a million miles.

The ground has targeted you and put you into orbit by tremendous velocities — up to about 25,000 miles an hour — and you're to coast around behind the moon at a distance of 60 miles.

This has got to be one of the most incredible things of the whole flight — that the ground can do this.

Because if they targeted you a little short, instead of coasting 60 miles behind it you could coast right into it, or hit it on the way out — any number of things.

A couple of hours before we were to make our burn we went into the lunar shadow.

So there we were in darkness.

Please, Thank You

We realigned our inertial platform. We went through the checklist — not just once, not just twice.

We joked a little — "gee, I hope those guys are right with 60 miles." I's an incredible position to be in and you do have a lot of faith in people. Besides, you have time to sit and think while you're going through that checklist, and you have time to say a few prayers.

You do say "please," and you do say "thank you," after the help you asked for has been given.

When you're someplace that is new and exciting, someplace you maybe never expected to be, someplace you're not sure is real, you almost pinch yourself and tell yourself "This is happing right now."

I did this once before in the space program. I can remember very distinctly and very vividly when I was walking — literally out in space on Gemini 9 — walking twice around the world.

There was a point when I stopped and I looked down at the world and I looked around me and I realized that I was really out in the pure vacuum of space — really there, right that very instant.

Moon Not Pretty

I stopped to think about it because I didn't want to lose the significance of that moment.

Well, I did that again, when we were around the moon. So much of the time you're so busy, and part of the business can mean your survival, your own safety.

But in the LM I said: "Gene, do you realize where you really are? and how close you are to almost nothing?" I didn't have a suit on and there was only a thin shell between me and the infinity of space.

Below was the moon surface, which I could see through the transparent yellow shades of the LM window. It was eerie to watch this moon, with that yellow tint, go by underneath.

Time Too Short

The moon certainly isn't pretty. It was exotic and it was different and it was challenging — challengingly beautiful, if you can call it that. I don't think it's forbidding. It's bright and it's light. It's not as though you're in a dark corner or a hermit's cave.

Here you've got the world in front of you and the moon at your feet. It's there and we're close to it — that's what makes it beautiful to me.

When we got down there at about 9 miles, or 47,000 feet above the lunar surface, things happened so fast that it's almost unfair, because there's such a short time — to really enjoy it — to do so many things.

Such as: map that part of the surface in landing site two with cameras, visually recognize where you are, do a landing radar test, pass over the site at a particular time and get some special photographs, pitch over and make sure you've got both computers programmed and set up to make a phasing burn, which was a very critical burn in this whole rendezvous technique.

We thought about what we would say, but what you heard was, "boy, we're down among 'em now, babe" — completely unrehearsed.

The horizon flattened out, and instead of seeing a round horizon you saw a flat one, and you could see big crater rims come over the horizon as mountains, and you didn't recognize them until you were just upon them.

It feels as though you're flying a lot closer to the mountaintops than 50,000 feet.

"You Have Time to Say A Few Prayers"

I used a phrase a number of times during our TV shows and I know it was poor English, but I used it deliberately.

I said, 'if you ain't seen it yet, it ain't happened.' What I meant was, 'what you're seeing didn't happen yesterday and you're not seeing a replay. You're watching history as it happens.'

We wanted to convey to people our own excitement. In many cases we didn't know any more of what would happen next than you did.

When we came up on the TEI burn (Transearth insertion) it was very quiet in the spacecraft. You know, if the burn to put us into lunar orbit didn't go properly, well, we could have coasted by the moon and do some work but we'd get home.

In the lunar rendezvous, if the LM couldn't make the burns, we still knew the command module had the capability of coming down and making a rescue.

But with TEI—for the first time — we had all marbles in one basket, one engine. This is the burn that gets you home.

No Joking

We were tired. We had been up 22 or 24 hours with very little rest. We had completed one of the most successful missions ever flown in the program. We had only one more job to do, and that was come home.

We had already had a few emotional things — first one fuel cell light went on, which meant that we were running on two fuel cells, and then, about 12 hours before we were due to come home, we got another fuel cell light on.

We had been getting fluctuating temperature in the second fuel cell and, lo and behold, just as we went behind the moon, where the earth could not help us or watch us, that second light came on and — bang, it's not a very good feeling to be behind the mooon with only one fuel cell and three batteries to get you home.

So now we were approaching the burn and for the first time in this flight there was no joking, no comments. No one was looking out at the lunar surface. No one was taking any pictures.

Those were probably the quietest 30 minutes of my whole life, and I got the feeling that all three of us, John and Tom and I, went our own way asking the help of God.

Three Monkeys

I certainly wasn't embarrassed to make the sign of the cross at that point.

Then, of course, we had successful ignition. We had to burn for almost six minutes, and it was the best I've ever seen.

After that it was a whole new world. We were like three monkeys running around in a cage. We were passing television cameras, all trying to talk at the same time, explaining to people what we saw, how we felt as the moon shrunk to the size of a basketball.

The first re-entry C load felt like 5 or 6 GS, because it was the first time we'd felt GS in eight days. Then we went on to 7 GS, but it was really no problem at all. After you get by the first one, it's a piece of cake.

The fireball started. Tom was in the centre seat and didn't have a forward-looking window. John was on the left and had to monitor the control system. I was the one who was able to look out.

Brilliant Fireball

Once that fireball started it was a golden white-hot flame. The tail on it appeared to me to be hundreds and hundreds of yards long.

I guess from the ground it appeared more like 15 miles long, and at the very apex of this flame, I could see something, a little round ball.

At the periphery of this fireball were not greens and reds and oranges but a solid violet-purple — a brilliant, bright violet-purple.

It was as if you had taken a beautifully shaped, long, thin wine bottle and covered it with about an inch of purple flame.

You could see the flame. It was not just the light you were seeing, it was the flame itself, tearing back into this fireball.

Those purples will stick in my mind forever.

How much Life Insurance do you need?

It would be nice if we could give you the exact answer in our advertising, but for this we require considerable knowledge about your financial situation, your family responsibilities and your present assets.

However, we do have a formula which enables you to list most of your important financial needs. These guidelines for life insurance are expressed in terms of a total dollar amount in some cases; in a percentage of annual income in others.

1 1 year's income—the amount your family will need to cover Estate Clean-Up costs.
M The mortgage remaining on your house.
¼ ¼ of your present salary to your wife after the children are educated.

Now you have on paper the basis of a truly sound plan for financial security for you and your family. The next step is to guarantee this security with life insurance. The Man from Manufacturers can show you how much you need.

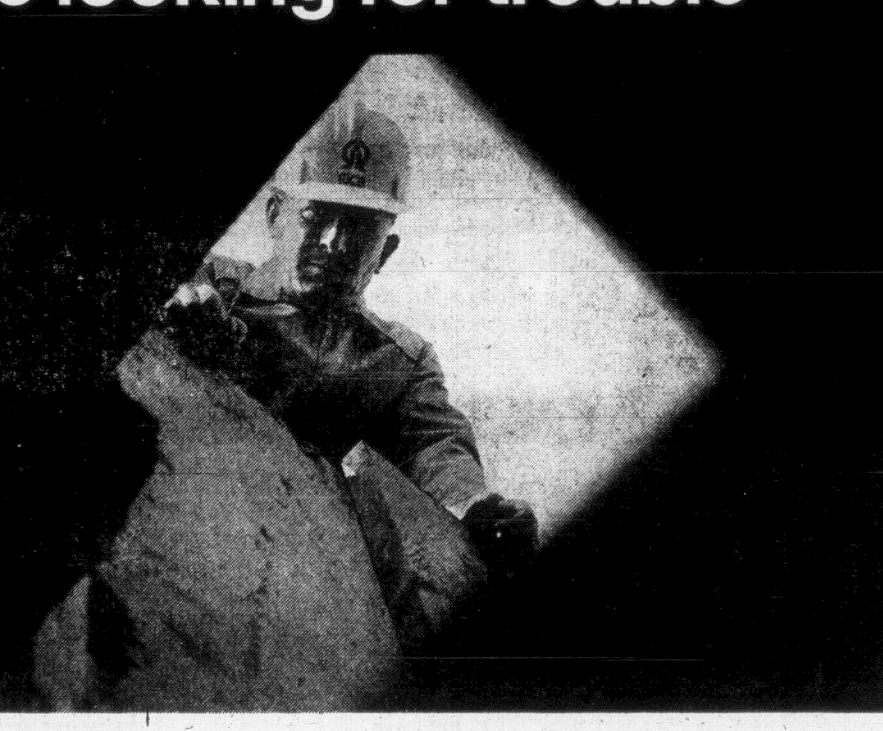
WCB safety inspectors are looking for trouble



It's part of the job of all Workmen's Compensation Board safety inspectors to look for trouble—the kind that can become big trouble that hurts. They're trained to keep a sharp lookout to make sure WCB safety regulations and first-aid service requirements are met and maintained. They play an important role in the safety education of both labour and management. They're on the scene to help make the place you work safer. Last year WCB safety inspectors made more than 18,000 inspections of all kinds of industrial operations throughout the province. In the course of these inspections, 25,908 instructions were made to correct hazardous conditions and to improve first-aid facilities. And with the co-operation of the St. John Ambulance, 136 first-aid "teach-ins" were held last year. In that time, 2,547 first-aid students met the high standards and qualified as industrial first-aid attendants. B.C.'s labour force is protected by a compensation plan second to none on the North American continent—financed entirely by employers. The WCB always strives to be fair and impartial in the settling of claims and in performing its other duties. The WCB is glad to help.

Getting Down to Basics

IT IS CLEAR THAT THE MAINland of British Columbia is suffering from the same hospital problem which afflicts the capital region—everybody is working hard at getting new hospitals but no hospitals are actually being built. Now the Greater Vancouver Regional Hospital District has delivered an ultimatum to provincial hospital authorities based on a list of priorities for hospital construction. The $51-million expenditure involved has already been approved by the voters of the region, and the situation has much in common with that obtaining in Greater Victoria.

On any specific challenge, both provincial and regional authorities can produce evidence of this action and that, and possibly pass the blame for delay to the other government level. And it may well be argued that nobody is deliberately holding up projects which are so obviously needed in a hurry. But the fact remains—and the public is becoming increasingly pragmatic on this—that hospital accommodation which the public voted for many months ago is still not in the construction stage. The provincial-regional arrangement is organized to build hospitals; but it is obviously not organized to build hospitals on an emergency basis, and it is on this basis that the public needs them.

When thousands of would-be patients must wait up to twelve months to get a hospital bed for elective surgery there is definitely an emergency situation. The building program has been proceeding in a planned and orderly manner—apart from some indecision and side squabbles—but the truth is that we are at least a decade behind in our requirements and something more urgent is called for.

As the senior government, the provincial administration must accept a good deal of the criticism from the public. There has been a lack of the crisp, decisive leadership which the situation called for; there has been too great a disposition to blame the regional boards for delay—for if the latter were delaying unduly the provincial government should have been after them to reach agreement and produce proposals. It is not enough to sit back and say that "we can do nothing because the other people are not ready . . ."

This brings in question the whole provincial-regional setup. Is it geared for the action that is required of it? Is there a close enough co-ordination between the two levels of government to achieve what is required?

There can be no question that the regional concept is a good one, and that as a means of achieving joint action among neighboring municipalities it has proved its worth. Inevitably it will expand its functions to embrace further public services of a regional nature. But is the liaison with the provincial government yet sufficiently organized for the proper efficiency? Have the various departments of government adjusted their thinking to the new concept? The mainland concern about the situation may well serve to bring answers to some of these questions. The public is growing increasingly restive, and with good reason. For the price it pays it has a right to demand the very best in executive and adminstrative efficiency.

Rocks for Rocky

GOVERNOR ROCKEFELLER'S fact-finding mission to Latin America on behalf of President Nixon has turned into a United States diplomatic disaster. Three countries recommended that he stay away, in others he was met by violent demonstrations and protests. But the governor is determined to carry on in the face of such hostility and further incidents are anticipated in the countries yet to be visited.

The reception being accorded Governor Rockefeller is reminiscent of the ill-starred Latin American tour made by Mr. Nixon eleven years ago when he was vice-president. Mr. Nixon was also harassed by spitting, stone-throwing mobs. The tragedy of this repetition of treatment is that the underlying causes are the same. Not enough has been accomplished in the past eleven years to eliminate them. There has been economic expansion in Latin America during that period but much of the benefit has been nullified by population growth. Politically there has been stagnation too, with limited progress toward the reform measures so urgently needed to win the support of the people.

This was pointed up by the fact that the demonstrations against Mr. Rockefeller were also directed at the host government. Signs protested local conditions such as inflation, housing shortages, low wage scales and inadequate educational facilities. On the other hand, there was also a clear warning to the United States: it must pay greater attention to the area or face the consequences. The protests against Mr. Rockefeller are essentially an expression of Latin frustration and anger because the hopes raised by President Kennedy and the U.S.-sponsored Alliance for Progress have not been realized.

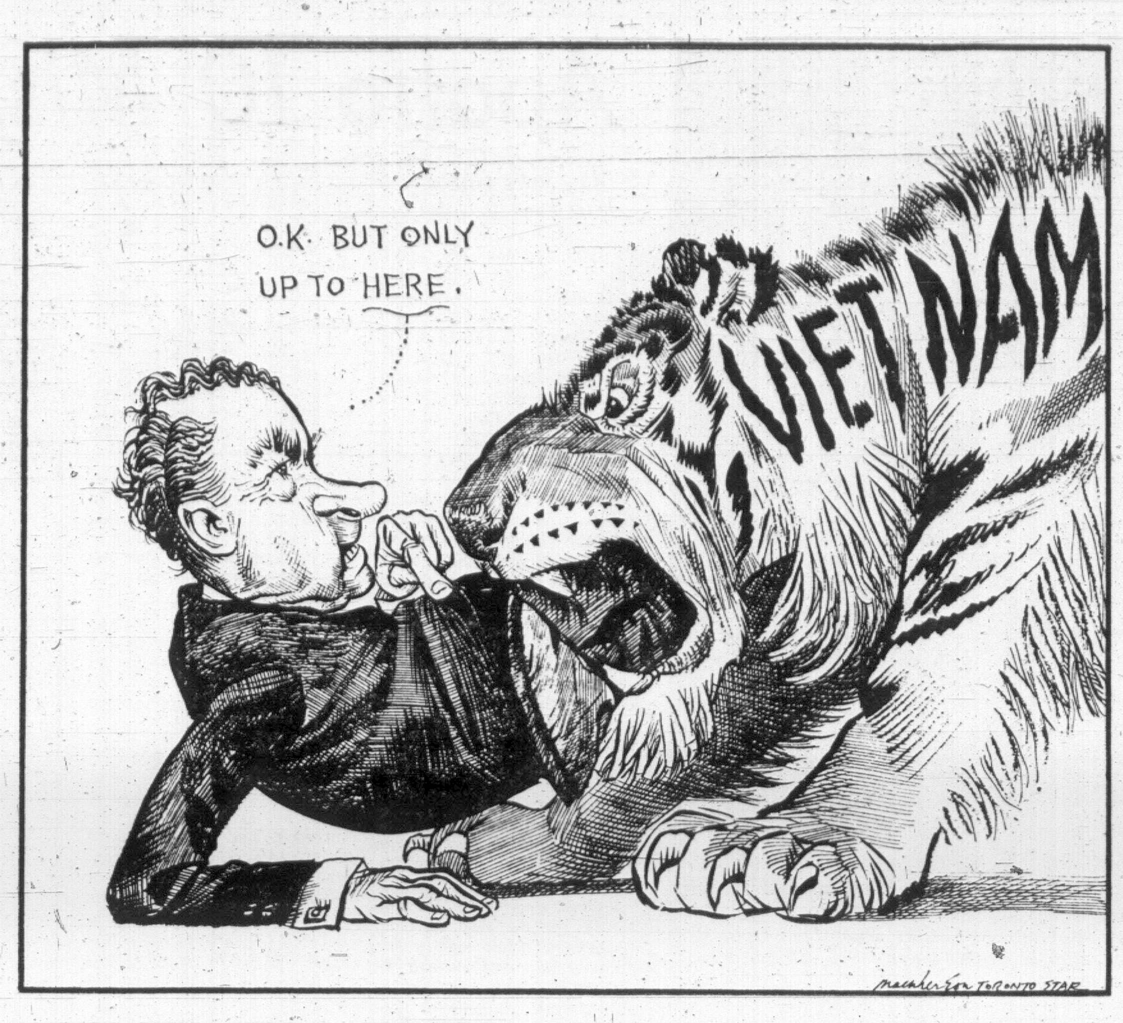
In the early days of his administration Mr. Nixon has contributed to this feeling by appearing to downgrade the importance of Latin American relations. Some of the appointments he has made have done little to inspire confidence. He has criticized the Alliance for Progress without suggesting ways in which it might be strengthened, or providing an alternative. Mr. Rockefeller's difficulties should be a warning to the President that changes will have to be made and that the situation is worsening.

Alexander of Tunis

CANADIANS WHO CAME TO know him in wartime and in peace, have learned with sadness of the passing of Earl Alexander of Tunis. They had admiration for him as a soldier who rose from the bitterness of the evacuation of Dunkerque and of Burma to lead the 8th Army in its triumph over Rommel and his Afrika Corps and who followed that success with victories in Europe. This feeling was matched by a genuine respect for him as a Governor-General of Canada—the last holder of that office who was not a Canadian by birth.

His death breaks another link in the chain reaching back into an earlier era in Canadian life and tradition. He served well, inspiring those about him in the grim days of battle, and later bringing to his diplomatic duties a character and personality which won him friendships in this country running far deeper than the formal appreciation extended to the representative of the sovereign. He achieved dignity without stiff formality, easy relaxation among people without detracting from the position he was required to maintain.

Though his official relationships with Canada ended in 1952, he had continued to show that interest in the country and its people which gained him wide popularity during his term as Governor-General—a man with feeling for Canada and an admiration for Canadian colleagues at arms whose quality he praised so highly and who served under him with confidence.



Letters

Hospital Disgrace

A recent letter in your paper draws attention to the fiasco of the Eric Martin Institute and suggests its immediate use for acute and chronic care patients.

This hospital was designed and created for the care of the mentally ill of Victoria and the Island, and its facilities are urgently needed now for the many emotionally disturbed of this area.

Due to politics and squabling between federal and provincial governments this building which should have been in operation over a year ago, has just now opened its door to out-patients only. The Jubilee hospital is responsible for the operating of the Institute but as the hospital has no funds of its own is unable to pay for the first month's operation costs. It is a disgrace that this "dynamic" province cannot find the money to finance the first month's operation which would be a very small percentage of the millions it cost to build the Institute. There is an urgent need for beds for the mentally ill, and it is costing the tax-payers more standing empty than if it were in full operation—Taxpayer.

Direct Heart Aid

On June 10, 1969, a statement was reported from the head physician of the Royal Columbian Hospital, to the effect that many victims of heart attacks could be saved, if they had modern equipment. The cost would be approximately $3,000-per-bed.

We can appreciate the doctor's frustration.

The last financial report received by me from the B.C. Heart Foundation, (1965) reads as follows:

Research—75 per cent—$261,669
Community Services — 3.1 per cent — $11,011
Education — 9 per cent — $31,496

These expenditures should be reversed, and the 75 per cent used for direct aid.

I feel that at least 75 per cent of all monies contributed by the public to aid the handicapped and afflicted should be used for direct aid.

Why should our hard working Kiwanis members, have to appeal to the public for funds with which to purchase the special equipment for our local hospitals, and no doubt those in other cities?—C. T. Jones, 1314 Quadra.

The "Mary" Bisection

In the June 9 issue of your paper, Page 15, column four, is the following statement: "Though bisections have been performed on tankers and freighters before, this is the first time it's been done to a passenger craft on the west coast of Canada."

Haven't you forgotten the "Princess Mary?"—Thos. Thomson, 2174 Cadboro Bay.

(Editor's Note: Right, Capt. Thomson. The Princess Mary was bisected in 1914 and 40 feet were added to give her a length of 260 feet.)

MR. TRUDEAU ADMITS FAILURE

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

Telepathy Without Communication

THE Canadian public, hardened by much worse tragedies, will not be deeply touched by Prime Minister Trudeau's first confession of error, his plaintive mea culpa.

Hutchison

Yet it is touching all the same, and important, for reasons which perhaps even he cannot understand.

"I have been told," he says, "that in my first year of office my greatest failure has been the lack of communication, and I think I agree with this."

Oddly enough, he has failed in the area where he was supposed to be the unique master. A year ago most Canadians thought that they understood him and his ideas as they had never understood his predecessors. An invisible bond of perception apparently had been established between the leader and the led, a secret channel not to be described in words, a kind of mental telepathy, almost a religious experience. Now, as Mr. Trudeau admits, the mystic spell is strained if not broken. The public and the man begin to see each other in the light of common day. And neither is what we had assumed.

The public, from Mr. Trudeau's standpoint, turns out to be more difficult to inform, inspire and lead than he has expected, the practical problems of the nation more complex and stubborn than they looked in the first careless raptures of an election campaign.

Hard to Follow

From the public's standpoint the prime minister is equally surprising, his policies unlike their advance billing, his alternate moods of optimism and melancholy hard to follow.

The confession of failure is related, so far, only to the official languages bill which, as he says, has been widely, almost comically, misunderstood. But the official languages bill is merely one part of the communication gap. The larger mystery is the prime minister himself.

Thus, on the one hand, we find Canadians of a conservative mind protesting that he is a left-wing radical determined to introduce socialism by the back door. On the other hand, T. C. Douglas and David Lewis announce the shattering discovery that he is a deep-dyed reactionary, an apostate to his youthful dream, a backslider who once belonged to the NDP and now belongs to Big Business.

It does not occur to either side of the argument that he may not be one thing or the other but only a very puzzled man because he is too intelligent to accept the worn-out cliches of these times. He rejects them, as all intelligent men must, but he has not yet found satisfactory substitutes.

Lacking Answers

Who has? Let the discontented Canadian citizen observe statesmen throughout the world, the Nixons, Brezhnevs, Maos, Wilsons and the rest, and let him ask himself whether they have the answer lacking in Canada. Of course they have not. All of them are just as puzzled as Mr. Trudeau, though they never admit mistakes or failures.

Prime Minister Wilson, to take the most obvious example, has completely reversed everything he said before coming to office, has adopted a strictly conservative policy while still denouncing the Conservative party, has repudiated the original doctrine of his own Labor party and yet has confessed no errors. He swallows all his promises in one smooth gulp.

Many of President Nixon's pre-election pledges have gone the same way already. What else can you expect when yesterday's wisdom is today's folly in a world that moves no one knows whither at a speed that no one thought possible?

The truth is that all these men are doing the best they can, realizing that it must be inadequate and quite likely wrong. While the fiction of consistency must be maintained for ceremonial purposes, no one really believes it any longer. While the party labels are still worn outwardly, they have become almost meaningless. Who knows what a liberal or a conservative is these days? Who can explain modern socialism? Assuredly not Messrs. Douglas and Lewis whose confusion must wring the hardest heart.

It is absurd, therefore, to fault Mr. Trudeau, or any politician, because he does not fit into some neat category of the past. He would be of little use to us if he did. The old ideologies, in fact, are dead and the new ones have yet to appear. We can be sure, however, that society, in Canada and elsewhere, will not return to its former shape. It may be better or worse than the present society but it will certainly be different and those who dislike change will not enjoy it.

Of this change the current Canadian symbol happens to be Mr. Trudeau. That, and not his specific policies or mistakes, is what makes him important. He admits one failure. He may fail altogether, as greater men like de Gaulle have failed, simply because the problems of all societies are not immediately soluble and must be lived with until time solves them one way or another.

Even if Mr. Trudeau succeeds well enough to survive for a couple of parliamentary terms, his success cannot satisfy him or any man of his intelligence. As he doubtless understands, this chaotic age forbids anything more than partial success and, for the first time in history, poses the possibility of total failure in the destruction of our species.

Hence the Canadian parlor game of psychoanalyzing the prime minister may be fascinating and harmless but it is a waste of time. All we know now is that he can admit mistakes and learn from them. And we know, too, as the central fact of politics for the moment, that there is no acceptable alternative to him. This fact, at least, has been fully communicated, not by him but by the opposition.

FROM LONDON

The Colored Immigrant Problem Darkens

BRITAIN gets little enough rest from her unresolved post-imperial problems. Controversy over the Nigerian war gives way to the unlikely Anguilla affair.

Traynor

That is followed in turn by new constitutional decisions in Rhodesia which deepen the rift between London and the breakaway central African colony. Now there has been an escalation in the struggle with Spain over Gilbraltar, and the Commonwealth immigration controversy is once again at the boil.

At intervals since 1965, Spain has stepped up its campaign to oust Britain from its most famous remaining imperial stronghold.

The campaign was focused on the United Nations, where committee decisions backed up the Spanish contention that the Rock should be "decolonized". Britain countered with a referendum, in which 98 per cent of Gibraltar residents voted to maintain the British link.

A new constitution has since been drawn up making Gibraltar a dominion and stipulating that its status will not be altered against the will of its 25,000 inhabitants. Having earlier placed obstacles in the way of air travel to and from Gibraltar, the Spanish authorities have now put the Rock out of bounds to the 4,600 workers who have gone to jobs there daily from homes on the Spanish side of the frontier.

A stituation which might once have touched off imperial thunder now raises only a modest rebuke and a suggestion that Britons not spend their holidays there as usual. Meanwhile, the Gibraltarians take comfort from the expectation of continued development aid and tap new sources of labor in Morocco.

Moral Consolation

Whatever the cost in terms of conflict with Spain, Britain has the considerable moral consolation of knowing that the accent is on the positive side of the imperial experience: the loyalty of the Gilbraltarians to the mother country.

No such consolation can be derived from the renewed controversy. As usual, it has been touched off by the maverick former minister, Enoch Powell. A year ago, he electrified the country with a blood-curdling prophecy of racial violence on the American scale.

Ever since, the leaders of his party, the Conservatives, have been painfully picking their way between moderate inclinations and the sometimes rabid demands of the party's Powellites, who envisage large scale repatriation of colored Commonwealth immigrants.

The party leader, Edward Heath, has sought to contain the Powellite upsurge by vigorously advocating tougher controls on future Commonwealth immigration, but within an overall framework of integration.

Mr. Powell cites figures purporting to show that steps taken so far to cut back colored immigration have not been as effective as has been claimed. Since 1962, entry per year has been limited to 7,500 voucher holders plus the dependents of immigrants already in the country: Mr. Powell claims annual figures have not fallen to the expected 20,000, but were still running in excess of 75,000 last year.

The government has recently stiffened defences against illegal immigration and has moved toward Mr. Heath's idea of excluding all but the immediate family from the definition of dependents eligible to join an immigrant who has settled here. Mr. Powell would go further and scrap the voucher system, placing colored Commonwealth immigrants on the same footing as aliens, whose movements within the country are recorded, and who have no automatic right to bring in families or take up citizenship. Unlike Mr. Heath, he would stop the inflow of dependents of immigrants already here and divert foreign aid into subsidizing repatriation.

Repatriation

What Mr. Powell considers his trump is a survey made by the British Broadcasting Corporation purporting to show almost 40 per cent of colored immigrants favor repatriation. Assuming a grant of $5,000 to each family, he has calculated that the total cost would be roughly equal to current foreign aid expenditures over an 18-month period. He repeated his call for a ministry of repatriation to oversee the operation.

The idea of voluntary repatriation is not rejected by any of the parties, but all seek to counter the illusion that there is a possibility of fundamentally reversing the immigrant situation. Mr. Powell has caused consternation with his claim that there is just time to do this before the bulk of the Commonwealth immigrant community ceases to be foreign and thus susceptible to repatriation. He has buttressed his argument with statistics purporting to show that the immigrant birth-rate has not, as expected, declined as the immigrants have settled into the British way of life.

Experts have disputed his inference as to the birth-rate from figures showing immigrant births to comprise between 20 and 25 per cent of the total in the Midland areas such as the one Mr. Powell represents in Parliament. According to Mr. Powell, this pattern represents a threat to the national identity, which only quick action can avert.

Looking Back

From the Times, June 17, 1909.

At length the fountain at the intersection of Government and Douglas streets is likely to return to its original use instead of giving to the corner where it stands the appearance of an old junk yard. The large fountain and the drinking fountain will be enclosed in a small space of greensward with a curb around it. The city today approved the project.

Cynical Leaders Turning Clock Back for Russia

By ANATOLE SHUB

Mr. Shub was Moscow correspondent of The Washington Post from April, 1967, until his expulsion by the Russians three weeks ago. His father was a Russian democratic revolutionary against the Czarist regime who was exiled in Siberia, escaping in 1908 and settling in the United States. This is the first of three articles.

For two years I have watched Russia's rulers grimly attempt to turn the clock back. In part, I believe, it has been a reversion to Stalinism, although there has been no purge of Communist leaders, and the political prisoners number scores of thousands, rather than millions.

In part, it has been a throwback to older tradition — to Russia as the "Gendarme of Europe," the guardian of absolutism and orthodoxy, its armies on permanent manoeuvres, poised to menace democracy and national independence beyond Russia's own frontiers.

However. the most striking "return" to past ways has had more tragic dimensions. For, as I left Moscow, many Soviet friends had come to believe that the present Kremlin rulers are leading Russia down the same melancholy path as the Romanov tsars a century ago.

By all accounts of those who have dealt with them, the men who deposed Nikita Khrushchev in 1964 are cynical, crude, narrow-minded, frightened for their own privileges.

They have shown themselves unable and increasingly unwilling to risk the reforms, small or large, required to meet the complex needs and aspirations of an ever more literate, sophisticated Russian society.

The present rulers quickly turned their backs on the progressive evolution in Yugoslavia, which Khrushchev had fitfully sought to emulate.

They used armed force to strangle Czechoslovakia's peaceful democratization, which was pointing Russia herself a way out of the vicious circle of power, privilege, terror and fear created by Lenin, Trotsky and Stalin. None of the Russian leaders himself stepped forward as a Soviet Dubcek or Tito.

Turned to Repression

Instead, the Kremlin bosses — Brezhnev, Suslov and Shelepin in the party machine; Grechko, Yepishev and Yakubovsky in the army; Andropov as well as the faceless professionals of the KGB (security police), Russia's "invisible government" — have turned increasingly to repression and reaction, xenophobia and mystification.

They appear to be counting on the fears and prejudices of the "dark people," the traditional mob of Russia's tragic history—and they are plunging the country's finest spirits into despair.

Yet their oppressive, anachronistic system cannot produce meat, apartments or happy smiles even for the "dark people." The sense of suffocation and choking among the educated is matched by the sullenness and permanent irritability of the masses.

For both, alcohol is often the sole relief. Abortions, ulcers, high blood pressure, psychosomatic illness are the toll exacted on an incalculable scale.

Should present policies prevail, many intelligent Russians feel that the likeliest result — once the unemasculated generation born after Stalin's death reaches manhood — will be a violent explosion. Such explosions have been frequent in Russian history, and have often brought only greater tragedy.

The constrast is striking between the atmosphere now and that of the autumn of 1963, when I first visited the Soviet Union. Although even then hopes were no longer as high as in the euphoric mid-fifties, an eager, curious youth was still being raised—officially—in the ambivalent yet stimulating spirit of de-Stalinization.

Late in 1962, Alexander Tvardovsky's progressive monthly Novy Mir had published the most important book of the Soviet era: "One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich," by Alexander Solzhenitsyn, who finally spoke for the scores of millions murdered or imprisoned under Stalin.

Throngs Heard Poetry

Thousands thronged to hear the brilliant, aristocratic poetry of Andrei Voznesensky and the more poignant ballads of Bulat Okudzhava.

Yevgeni Yevtushenko publicly denounced "the heirs of Stalin" and mourned the victims of anti-Semitism in "Babi Yar." Perhaps more important, Dostoyevsky, who had foreseen it all, was available and readable again.

After an entire generation in which Russia had been "the dark side of the moon," its scientists, artists and social scientists had renewed contacts with the real world of the west.

It was under Khrushchev and Anastas Mikoyan (eased out in 1966) that the ideas of economic reform later loosely labelled "liberalism" were first solicited and publicly aired.

Soviet foreign policy in 1963 seemed similarly promising. In spite, or because, of the Berlin and Cuba confrontations, Russia was basking in the glow of the nuclear test-ban treaty, a symbol of Khrushchev's readiness to meet the west part-way.

"Peaceful economic competition with capitalism," "overtaking the United States in consumption of meat, milk and butter," were still official promises (although the unreformed economic system gave scant hope of ever fulfilling them).

Literate Russians had to understand, too, that the break with the China of Mao Tse-tung and Liu Shao-Chi, the attack on Peking's doctrines of permanent revolution, then represented, at least potentially, a vehicle for justifying ultimate reconciliation with the West.

Even in April, 1967, when I returned to Moscow to live, there remained some grounds for cautious optimism. The new Kremlin leaders had already halted de-Stalinization, stepped up the missile race, committed Soviet arms to the Vietnam war, and sent Andrei Sinyavsky and Yuli Daniel to the Potma concentration camp.

Yet the new leaders' style seemed cautious and modest (much like that of the early Stalin), and their promises of better farm incomes and rationalized industrial management seemed saner and tidier than Khrushchev's impulsive projects.

For the 50th anniversary of Lenin's revolution, Western, Czecholslovak and East German consumer goods were imported in large quantities.

They made Moscow and Leningrad, at least, seem nearly as normal to the transient visitor as Potemkin's typical villages specially constructed to please Catharine the Great.

Many optimistic Russians, as well as foreigners, believed inspired stories that Sinyavsky and Daniel would be amnestied, that Pasternak's "Doctor Zhivago" would be published, that Solzhenitsyn's new novels would be permitted to appear in Novy Mir.

Looking backward, it seems that the jubilee year was largely a put-on, with the Kremlin leaders on their best behavior chiefly to avoid domestic or international scandal. Svetlana Stalin was not impressed and left the country.

U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson, although he never said so publicly, had privately concluded by the summer of 1967 that "the wrong gang" was in power.

In fact, there was an obvious turn for the worse with the Middle East War. Not only KGB and military intelligence agents but politburo members had directly helped provoke the conflict by spreading the verifiable lie that Israeli troops were massing to attack "progressive" Syria.

In the wake of Israel's victory, reactionaries in Russia, the Ukraine, Bessarabia and the Baltic states launched a fierce "anti-Zionist" campaign, which continues unabated.

It was recognized by both Jews and anti-Semites to be potentially as lethal as Stalin's murderous drive against "rootless cosmopolitans" (1948-53). Even in civilized Leningrad, Jews say the climate now is "the worst since 1952."

Crushed Their Hopes

The pretensions of the jubilee year ended with the Moscow trial of Yuri Galanskov and Alex Ginsburg in January 1968. "Vigilance" became the watchword at the "historic" April plenum of the party central committee, which proclaimed an open season for the KGB, MVD and cultural hatchetmen.

The invasion of Czechoslovakia finally crushed the evolutionary hopes of Russia's "loyal liberals"—hopes which had been so earnestly formulated by the Soviet nuclear physicist, academician Andrei Sakharov.

From Aug. 20, 1968 onward, it became clear that, so far as the Kremlin summit was concerned, there could no longer be serious talk of a "liberal" or even a "moderate" faction.

As a seasoned neutral diplomat sadly observed, "the struggle is between the conservatives and the reactionaries"—between plodding, coarse, relatively cautious old Stalinists and more dynamic, ambitious younger Apparatchiki.

Correspondent Shub in Moscow

Last October, the classic signs began to appear of a grim, intense struggle for Kremlin power, involving various leaders, factions and patronage groups, the rival machines of the party, army, KGB and MVD (civil police).

The "winning combination" has yet to emerge, although I suspect it will within a year. Meanwhile, the victims have been individuals and national groups striving for basic rights throughout the vast multinational empire occupied by Soviet garrisons from the Vltava to the Ussuri.

Physicist in Jail

The fate of a brilliant young Tartar physicist, R. K. Kadiyev, shows how swiftly and drastically times changed. Last year, Kadiyev and a colleague presented to an international conference in Tbilisi startling new astronomical and space researches confirming and deepening Einstein's theory of relativity.

Today, Kadiyev sits in Tashkent jail, the chief defendant at a secret trial of 10 Tartar intellectual leaders who have been struggling for the return of their people to the Crimean homeland from which Stalin deported them in 1944.

It was to attend the trial of Kadiyev and his comrades last month that the gruff, fearless Ukrainian democrat, former Maj. Gen. Pyotr Grigorenko, went to Tashkent — in full knowledge that he too would be arrested.

The KGB and MVD have decimated the hardy little Moscow underground, the activist civil-liberties movement led by Grigorenko and Pavel Litvinov.

Yet the Kremlin rulers have not succeeded in establishing the kind of "order" they seem to crave, the order which Marx in his time called "the peace of the graveyard."

Instead, like the Romanov Tsars before them, they have been sowing dragons' teeth. For with each new act of repression they are creating new oppositionists, turning non-politicals into politicals, liberal evolutionists into potentially radical revolutionists.

Five months after the invasion of Czechoslovakia, a young Soviet army engineer lieutenant named Ilyin boarded the crimson night train from Lenigrad to Moscow. The next day, he borrowed a police uniform from a relative — and on Jan. 23, 1969, inside the Kremlin's Borovitsky Gate, fired shots almost surely intended for Brezhnev.

Although Ilyin's act may well be a milestone in Russian history, Soviet officials have not explained it to this day. Instead, tipsters for the contending Kremlin factions have, from the start, been circulating two rival accounts.

According to the conservatives, Ilyin was a Soviet Oswald, a "paranoid" loner, and has already been, or soon will be, officially certified as insane.

According to the reactionaries, the lieutenant from Leningrad was part of a "counter-revolutionary gang," with accomplices high in the Soviet army, MVD, and elsewhere, all of whom will soon be exposed and brought to trial.

'Wake Up Russia'

For their part, Russian democrats have compared young Ilyin with both the Decembrist rebel officers of 1825 and the Populist revolutionary terrorists of Tsarism's last four decades. They have drawn heart from the story that Ilyin, interrogated personally by Andropov as to why he did it, replied: "Chtob Razbudit Rossiyu", "To wake up Russia."

There is absolutely no way to verify which, if any, of these stories may be true. For in Brezhnev's Moscow, no foreigners and indeed very few Russians ever know anything for certain about matters of importance — and hardly much more about matters most countries regard as trivial.

It is precisely such knowledge, on the part of the Soviet peoples and the world, that the Stalinist system (only partly modified under Khrushchev) was constructed to prevent.

The system is still operating, barbed wire, microphones and all, under Stalin's heirs.

Starfish Ruin Coral Barriers

By STUART AUERBACH

A marauding starfish nicknamed "the crown of thorns" is eating away some of the Pacific Ocean's most famous coral reefs and threatening the existence of the islands they surround.

The sudden and unexplained population growth of the starfish worries scientists and government officials, who are sending an expedition to the Pacific next month to find ways to end the infestation.

"It's a real disaster," says Dr. Raymond Fosberg of the Smithsonian Institution. "We're not only going to lose the coral, but everything that depends on them"—including hundreds of species of fish that provide protein food for Pacific islanders.

In addition, the coral reefs that surround many Pacific islands protect them from eroding under the pressure of wind and waves.

The starfish, whose scientific name is acanthaster planci, has already destroyed 100 square miles of Australia's famous Great Barrier Reef. During the past two years it has killed 90 per cent of the coral along 24 miles of Guam's coastline and the infestation has been spotted around the Pacific islands of Palau, Saipan and Rota.

"A medium sized atoll could be wiped out in five years," says Dr. R. D. Gaul, manager of the Westinghouse Ocean research laboratory in San Diego.

The Smithsonian has only one example of the spiny, 18-inch poisonous starfish in its extensive collection of marine life. A 15-month study of sea life on the great barrier reef in 1928 turned up only one specimen. Now, 127 of the starfish were found on a five-square-mile sample of the reef.

The starfish has only two known natural enemies: a large, conchlike stinging shellfish called the triton, which is as rare as "the crown of thorns" used to be, and the living coral itself, which eats most of the microscopic larvae that grow to be young starfish.

Now, scientists say, there are too many starfish for either the triton or the coral to consume.

One U.S. Interior Department official worries that the starfish may be carried into the Caribbean's coral beds.

"Something has happened to the world ecology that has upset the delicate balance whereby this very efficient coral predator was kept in check," says Dr. Gaul.

No one knows the precise cause of the population explosion—Dr. Gaul says that is one reason for the Pacific expedition—but there are a number of unsubstantiated theories.

But scientists speculate that an unknown natural enemy of the starfish has been destroyed by either DDT, other pesticides or atomic radiation from the many nuclear tests in the Pacific.

Others—including the Smithsonian's Dr. Fosberg and Dr. R. H. Chesher, who has been working on Guam for the past nine months—feel dredging operations disturbed the coral reefs and moved the starfish away from the live coral which would consume its larvae.

★ ★ ★

"What happened here," speculates Dr. Fosberg, "is the larvae landed on the dredging debris, weren't eaten and grew to be adult. Then, they moved out to the reef."

"The crown of thorns" eats by extending a large digestive sac from the centre of its body over a coral formation. This pulls the living coral from the skeleton.

"The final stage is when the coral breaks up. The once beautiful reef is completely ruined and the sight that remains is reminiscent of a bombed out city," writes John Harding in the magazine "Sea Frontiers."

The Absurdity of Schools

By JOHN BREMER

Centre Forum

The quest for an appropritate way of life, the question of how to live, is not remote; on the contrary, it faces us all the time.

And yet, if as a teacher, I cannot relate to this question what I and my students are doing together and particularly if what we are doing together is not itself an appropriate way of life, then it is almost certain that we ought not to be doing it.

●

When we consider the ways in which teachers and students act in the ordinary building to which we have attached the name "school" (which properly belongs to the process, of course, not the place), can we say that it is an appropriate way of life? Is it a way of life at all?

Listen to what Whitehead says:

"There is only one subject-matter for education, and that is Life in all its manifestations. Instead of this single unity, we offer children: algebra, from which nothing follows; geometry, from which nothing follows; science from which nothing follows; history, from which nothing follows; a couple of languages, never mastered; and lastly, most dreary of all, literature, represented by plays of Shakespeare with philological notes and short analyses of plot and character to be in substance committed to memory.

"Can such a list be said to represent life, as it is known in the midst of the living of it? The best that can be said of it is, that it is a rapid table of contents which a deity might run over in his mind while he was thinking of creating a world, and had not yet determined how to put it together." . . .

First, children should be out of the school building, and its immediate vicinity, for a large part of their school time; and I do not mean "taking trips," isolated experiences of wandering in a long line (rather like a snake that has just shed its skin and is doubtful about its boundaries) through museum corridors with periodic, half-minute halts to gape at an exhibit or to collect stragglers.

What I mean is a continuing experience, perhaps in museums, but preferably in offices, stores, laboratories, factories, in firehouses, at airfields, by dockside — it does not matter so much about the place, but the student must have enough time to find out what it is like to live in that place, to be a real part of it, and for it to be a real part of him . . .

Our present practice in my opinion, requires children become figments in the school administrator's fantasy; they are used rather in the way children themselves play with dolls in a dollhouse. Since they are not dolls but living human beings, they have to be made to obey.

And the curriculum has been shaped to serve as one of the major means of achieving this obedience.

●

The curriculum has become a full-time occupation for children (lest they idly and irresponsibly do what interests or amuses them,) based upon rote memory work and not evidence (lest they achieve independence through their own intelligence), to be studied for short periods of time (lest in spite of everything they become engaged in it), and with little or no external connection with any known aspect of life (lest it becomes relevant and important).

The absurdities are obvious, and yet it goes on and on. To whose advantage? Clearly not the students. What is the use, the good of it? Where is the value?

You may not love its looks, but you'll never hate its guts.

We made it to give you the most possible car for your money. Which is why it was voted Car of the Year in Europe.

And that's the kind of contest we like to win.

Of course, there's a lot to be said for a VW. But there's a lot more to say about the Fiat 124 sedan.

A Fiat 124 sedan has a 4-cylinder inline engine. With a 5-bearing crankshaft.

A Fiat 124 sedan has an all-synchro 4-speed gearbox.

A Fiat 124 sedan handles tight as a sports car. Which is what all Fiats are famous for.

It has power assisted disc brakes on all four wheels.

Not to mention impact absorbing body construction.

In short, you get a lot more than your $2,395.* worth. Which is all a Fiat 124 sedan will cost you.

You actually get space and change to spare. (The space thing is probably what bugs you most about the Bug.)

Pompidou: 'Change With Continuity'

allow his opponents access to the state-controlled television monopoly? Even the informed Frenchman could only hazard guesses.

The theme of Pompidou's campaign, "change with continuity," deliberately opened all these questions. But throughout, he deftly avoided providing answers.

Teacher's Son

The grandson of a laborer and cowherd, son of an ambitious, largely self-taught schoolteacher, Pompidou was born in the village of Montboudif in the poverty-ridden Auvergne region of Central France. Even today, Montboudif remains a town with only two main streets, a population of about 500 and an economy that depends on peasant farming.

Pompidou's father, who himself had made a giant step up the social and economic ladder, was determined that his son should climb to the top. He appears to have been a tough and demanding taskmaster, walloping youg Georges when he failed to place first in his class at shcool.

The persistence paid handsome dividends. At the age of 14, Georges entered the respected Lycee Louis-le-Grand in Paris and later won admission to the prestigious Ecole Normale Superieure.

Brilliant Scholar

Pompidou capped his brilliant academic career with an "aggregation literature," the equivalent of a doctorate, at the age of 24. The highly coveted "aggregation" is required for anyone wishing to serve as a professor in a French lycee or university.

When the Second World War erupted, Pompidou had been assigned a post in a Paris lycee. He was mobilized as a lieutenant in an infantry unit and briefly saw action along the Maginot line before the French capitulation. During the Nazi occupation, he remained a teacher at the Paris lycee and took no part in the Resistance movement.

After the liberation of Paris and de Gaulle's triumphal return to a Free France Pompidou offered to serve on the general's staff "in any capacity." He landed a job as a minor official preparing intelligence digests for de Gaulle and his new administration.

De Gualle Impressed

By 1946, de Gaulle was obviously impressed by Pompidou's performance. When the general abruptly resigned he told Pompidou, "I'll be needing you."

Now 35, Pompidou decided to cut the cord with academe. He turned down a prestigious appointment and opted instead for a job with the commission of tourism. At the same time, he maintained close contacts with the self-exiled de Gaulle serving as part aide, part secretary.

Liaison Officer

In the early 1950s, when de Gaulle attempted a political comeback, Pompidou became a key liaison officer between the general and his parliamentary troops, the Rassemblement du Peuple Francais (RPF), the original right-wing nucleus of today's Gaullist party.

Surrounded by veterans of the Free French movement, men who had risked becoming outcasts by rallying to de Gaulle in London and Algiers or those who had played cat and mouse with the Gestapo inside France as leaders of the Resistance, Pompidou seemed a fair-weather friend who had only climbed aboard the Gaullist ship after its triumphal arrival in port.

Unlike many Frenchmen, however, Pompidou has never attempted to endow himself with an ex-post-facto Risistance role. Indeed, in his prepared biographical sketch in the French Who's Who, Pompidou even omits mention of his military service as a lieutenant before the surrender.

Bank Officer

In 1954, when de Gaulle abandoned his hoped for a political comeback, the general dissolved the RPF and his personal administrative staff. Pompidou accepted a job as senior executive in the Rothschild Bank, tripling his salary. Two years later he was made director general of the bank.

Pompidou moved into a fashionable apartment on the Ile Saint Louis, began collecting antiques and modern paintings, began frequenting the Riviera resort of St. Tropez and became a fixture of a swinging Paris "magic circle" that included painters, sculptors, writers and show biz celebrities.

Algerian Crisis

In February of 1958, with French governments falling like ten pins under the weight of the Algerian crisis, de Gaulle's political hopes were rekindled and the general cryptically informed Pompidou: "I may be needing you again."

Three months later an army revolt had brought the general back to power. Pompidou disclaims any role in de Gaulle's dramatic return. At the time, he says, "I was probably the worst informed man in France."

If Pompidou has been considered a "Johnny-come-lately" and an opportunist by many Gaullists in the RPF days, he now could easily turn aside such criticism. Whereas most of the Gaullist faithful had "collaborated" with the enemy after 1954, accepting ministerial and other lesser posts in Fourth Republic governments, Pompidou had remained politically uncompromised. Indeed, he had independently made his own way with stunning success.

Cabinet Offer

When de Gaulle was elected president and formed the first government of his new Fifth Republic he offered Pompidou the job of finance minister. Pompidou, however, turned it down and returned to the Rothschild Bank. He later explained that he preferred to stay out of the "spotlight" in order to maintain his privacy. Political calculations also played a part in the decision.

In 1962, with the Algerian war settled, de Gaulle did just that. The general astounded the French political world by naming as his new prime minister a man who had never been elected to public office. Moreover, the man he chose was popularly viewed as "a man of the Rothschilds," which in French political terms was the equivalent of an American president naming a robber baron as a labor mediator in the 1930s.

Surprise Appointment

A year earlier de Gaulle had given Pompidou the delicate — and secret — task of paving the way for the Algerian peace conference through preliminary contacts and negotiations in Switzerland. Nevertheless Pompidou's appointment caught all of France by surprise.

Pompidou's initial performance, both as a public debater in the national assembly and as manager of the Gaullist party, was openly acknowledged as a disaster. But by 1964, the influential Le Monde reported a crucial national assembly debate in the following terms: "In five minutes, Pompidou not only showed oratorical gifts but he demonstrated to the UNR (the new Gaullist party) and the majority that he is the leader."

In his final years in office, Pompidou's political credentials were unchallengeable. He had proved himself a formidable vote-getter in local elections and also a brilliant political tactician. His primacy over the Gaullist party was secure, and it was largely due to his efforts that the party was transformed from an informal association into France's first modern non-Communist political machine.

Dominated Assembly

He dominated the national assembly, forcing it to approve government programs unchanged even though the Gaullists were outnumbered by their opponents.

During the student revolt and worker's protest in May, 1968, which almost toppled the Gaullist regime, Pompidou singlehandedly seemed to shore it up while other ministers panicked and while de Gaulle appeared to fumble for an appropriate response to turn the tide.

Pompidou masterminded the crushing Gaullist election victory that followed, delivering to de Gaulle the largest national assembly majority every achieved in modern France.

A week after the final votes were counted, on July 10, 1968, de Gaulle once again astounded France's political world. He fired Pompidou, announcing that his "dear friend" was being placed "in reserve of the republic." It was widely assumed that the general was trying to cut Pompidou down to more manageable size.

Pompidou took his dismissal without a public word of protest or criticism. Privately, he told friends that the thought the general had committed a major error; that de Gaulle would face new and even more serious problems and that he doubted the president would remain in power until 1972, the end of his seven-year term. With extreme caution, Pompidou began to position himself for the succession and ward off attacks by his Gaullist rivals. In January of this year he announced that he would be a presidential candidate.

POMPIDOU MUST FACE BIG WAGE DEMANDS

PARIS (WP) — France's president-elect, Georges Pompidou, will face as his first order of business a backlog of pressing demands for large wage increases and social reforms that could undermine the French franc.

The millions of militant leftist French voters who boycotted Sunday's presidential election are expected to make their voices heard on these issues from the moment Pompidou takes office on Friday.

Bennett Denies Isolationism

Premier W. A. C. Bennett Monday refuted the charge that he is an "isolationist" levelled by the president of the federal Progressive Conservative party.

Frank Moores, speaking in Vancouver Friday, said British Columbia was the "most separatist-minded province in Canada" and that Bennett appeared oblivious to the problems of the rest of Canada.

"Of course just the opposite is true," said Bennett prior to his first cabinet meeting since returning from the federal-provincial conference in Ottawa last week.

"B.C. has always attempted to put forth plans to strengthen all of Canada from coast to coast."

"This was the purpose of the B.C. proposal at the Ottawa for a basic, annual income for all Canadians.

"That's the way to build unity."

His proposal received a lukewarm reception from the federal government but will be studied further by a committee.

Bennett said he was referring only to taxation when he stated that "anarchy and chaos" would result from the provinces going into the indirect taxation field.

Replying to the charge that he is uninterested in the rest of Canada, Bennett said "I was born in New Brunswick, lived for 10 years in Alberta and am now enjoying life in B.C."

"But I consider myself a Canadian first and last and always will."

Military Pay Raised

LONDON (AP)—Defence Secretary Denis Healey announced Monday a 3.5 per cent pay boost for Britain's armed forces, retroactive to April 1.

PREMIER SETTING HOT VOTE PACE

Premier W. A. C. Bennett continues to set an election campaign pace this week amid growing rumors of a fall provincial election.

Bennett will appear in Burnaby Thursday to officiate at a factory opening and travels into the Interior to Creston for a fund-raising dinner on Saturday.

Alcoholic's Wife Hands in Own Brief

A thin, middle-aged woman sat in the corridor outside the Victoria Law Courts Monday, afraid to read her brief aloud to the Royal Commission investigating B.C.'s liquor laws.

She described her husband as an "alcoholic bum" who might become violent if he found out about her brief. She did submit it privately but declined to give her name. The brief will be read only by the three commissioners.

She said she asked the commission to "make the brewers pay money from their profits for research into alcoholism."

The woman said her husband earns $7,000 a year and spends much of it on beer. She said he doesn't know he's alcoholic and "I expect to find him dead on the doorstep any morning."

In an interview, she gave this outline of her husband's liquor problem:

"Alcoholics Anonymous can't help him until he admits he needs help. He thinks our family doctor is mad for suggesting he can't leave beer alone. He's ignored the psychiatrist.

'I guess what hurts most, because I love him, is that he doesn't believe me. The only people he will listen to are his beer parlor friends. And are they likely to tell him?

"With the mortgages paid off, my husband thinks he can drink more because the extra money is available. But he's spending half his pay on beer and the little he gives me for groceries I use to buy clothes and furniture with."

As for the chidren:

"I suppose they would talk to him if he came home but he's never sober when they are awake. It's sad — for them for us; for him.!'

Princess Weds

PARIS (AP)—Princess Maria Gabriella of Savoy, daughter of former King Humbert of Italy, was married Monday to Robert de Balkany, a divorced, Romanian-born French financier, it was reported Tuesday.

Church-Run Pubs Could Fight Drink

Roman Catholic archbishop Martin Johnson, member of a three-man commission investigating B.C. liquor laws suggested Monday that churches and teetotallers run pubs and use the profits to fight alcoholism.

"I don't mean to be facetious but I wonder if church and temperance organizations would be willing to operate pubs."

The churches "would not be pushers and certainly they wouldn't be encouraging drinking. They would rather teach people how to "drink" with some moderation.

'ABSOLUTELY NOT'

His suggestion was greeted with an "absolutely not" from Frank Hunter, ex-Victoria mayorality candidate and former city clerk. He co-presented a brief with social worker Reg Clarkson on behalf of the Greater Victoria Association on Alcoholism Monday.

Johnson questioned the group's contention that the legal drinking age in B.C. remain at 21

While he admitted 21 was the age which separated the men from the boys in the past he said "some briefs this commission has heard so far would lead one to believe that 21 is no longer valid" as an indication of a person's maturity.

"Is it not a violation of their freedom and their sense of responsibility to deny 19 and 20-year-olds the right to say yes or no?

VOTE AT 19

"We say they can vote at 19, they can defend their country, then do we turn around and say oh, no, you can't have this responsibility?"

Hunter said a "line of demarcation" must be drawn somewhere and if 19 and 20-year-olds are allowed the freedom to drink, 16 and 17-year-olds might use the same argument.

He also said that widespread student rebellion on university campuses was an example of "the irresponsibility of young people."

"I haven't heard any university president or governor say what happned on campuses is a result of all the students. It is wrong to group them all together," said Johnson.

NO FEMALES EMPLOYED

Ed Lawson, joint council president of the Teamsters' Union and commission member, asked whether the association's recommendation that females not be employed in beer parlors also apply to cocktail lounges.

Hunter said it wouldn't, because cocktail lounges generally attract a higher quality clientele.

Lawson also asked if the group's suggestion to close bars at 11 p.m. would not be unfair to men on night shift work, who get off at midnight for example, and want to drop into a bar for a drink.

Every Chevelle has to make it before we mark it.

GM MARK OF EXCELLENCE

Chevelle Malibu Sport Coupe

Maybe we should call it the reducing machine.

But don't despair.

Because Chevelle,"the concentrated Chevrolet," has come up with a welcome way of reducing them—and still giving you a lot more car in the bargain.

It works like so: You put the items you want on the Chevelle you want and chances are we can give it to you for even less money than last year. Add Powerglide, head restraints, power disc brakes, wheel covers and whitewalls to our Malibu Sport Coupe, for example, and we'll reduce the price by a whopping $96.00*.

What we haven't mentioned, however, is that while you can get this '69 Malibu Sport Coupe for $96.00* off the price of last year's model, similarly equipped, it isn't the same car as last year's model.

It has windows-up Astro Ventilation. It has a new theft-thwarting steering column, shift lever, and ignition lock. It has an even smoother and quieter 200-hp standard V8. And it has a list of optional items you can't get from many cars at any price.

House Demands Huong Resign

By DAVID HOFFMAN

SAIGON (WP)—South Vietnam's House of Representatives proposed Monday that a joint session of Congress demand the replacement of Premier Tran Van Huong and his one-year-old government.

It was apparent from the complicated context of Monday's voting that a majority of the representatives present favored the 65-year-old premier's prompt dismissal.

But only 68 representatives—the barest legal quorum—were on the House floor for the final vote. Forty-nine of them favored a joint session with the Senate to debate "a vote of no-confidence in the present cabinet of Mr. Tran Van Huong."

The vote climaxed a stormy, day-long session in which congressmen roundly denounced the premier for imposing higher taxes on imported luxuries.

At the conclusion of the session, Rep. Tran Quy Phong asked that a report of the day's proceedings be forwarded to President Nguyen Van Thieu. Such reports are forwarded automatically at the request of any legislator. But Phong went a step further.

He proposed that the following recommendation be tacked onto the standard summary: That Thieu should "make use of his presidential powers . . . to dismiss the present cabinet, including Mr. Tran Van Huong, and to form a new cabinet. . . ."

According to representatives present, there were no objections to Phong's seemingly controversial recommendation.

South Vietnamese sources are certain the National Assembly can never muster the absolute two-thirds majority required to force Huong's replacement.

Should such a majority somehow be obtained, Thieu is constitutionally empowered to send the resolution back to the legislature. Then, an absolute three-quarters majority becomes necessary.

France, CBC Launch Serial

PARIS (CP) — French television is launching a new serial about a pioneer of early Canada, with French-speaking Canadian actor Albert Millaire in the leading role.

Called d'Iberville the serial is a joint production of the CBC in Canada, the Belgian and Swiss broadcasting systems, and France's own TV authority.

Its launching tonight will be followed by inauguration next Monday of a five-day festival of French-language programs to be trasnmitted on an exchange basis in the four countries and also in Luxembourg and Monaco.

Stop reading as they did 100 years ago!

THE WAY IT WAS—1868

100 years ago, people read the way you are reading right now. Word by word. About 250 - 350 words per minute.
100 years ago, that kind of reading was okay. You could keep up with what was happening fairly well.

THE WAY IT IS—1968

Today, it doesn't work. There's simply too much to read. Too much correspondence. Too many magazines. Too many books. Too many journals. Too many reports and memos. Too much homework. Things are happening so fast, changing so fast, that even the people who try to keep up are falling behind.

WHAT'S THE SOLUTION?

Learn to read faster and better.

IS IT POSSIBLE?

Yes, in Vancouver this month over 150 people will do it. Over 400,000 people have graduated so far.
People with different jobs, different IQs, different educations and backgrounds. Business people, professional people, students and housewives.

SO?

So, think for a moment what that means. All of them—even the slowest—now read newspaper pages in under 2 minutes. An average novel in less than 2 hours. Time Magazine in 25 minutes. College texts 50 - 75 pages an hour. No skipping. No skimming. They read every single word. And, they use no machines. The material they're reading determines their speed.

WELL, HOW ABOUT . . .

Comprehension? They actually understand more and more and remember more and enjoy more than when they read the way you do.
That's right. They understand more. They remember more. They enjoy more.

BUT . . .

No buts. In fact, we guaranteed to refund the entire tuition fee to any student who fails to at least triple his reading efficiency.

COULD THIS BE . . .

Yes. The same one. The late President Kennedy invited Evelyn Wood to the White House to teach Dynamic Reading to his Joint Chiefs of Staff.
It's the same course Congressmen and Canadian MPs have taken.

NOW.

Shouldn't you find out more about it? You can, simply by phoning 384-8121 or calling to 1012 Douglas St.
We'll tell you why you read so slowly. Show you a film. Explain the course more fully. Answer any questions you may have.
You'll be under no pressure to enroll. If you want to, fine. If not, okay. But do call. It could change your life.

DERYK HYDELAY—Teacher: "I recommend this course highly. I tackle my reading with more enjoyment and confidence and my recall ability is much greater."

PAUL KJEKSTAD — Student: "I read 3 to 10 times faster with greater comprehension. All students should take this course."

Blenders of fine cigarettes through six reigns

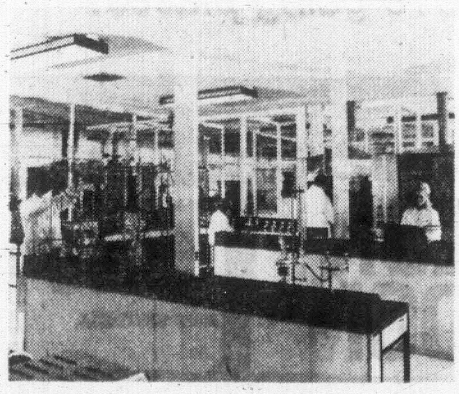
Every day, from Pall Mall through the West End of London, Rothmans still deliver their world-famous cigarettes to select Clubs and Embassies by coach and footmen. This time-honoured custom is a tradition of the House of Rothmans of Pall Mall.

It all began in a gas-lit London shop in 1890. Here, publicly working at a bench in the window, young Louis Rothman brought to the cigarette trade his singular skills and experience in the hand-blending of fine cigarettes. Louis Rothman could judge tobacco blindfolded, by its texture and aroma alone, and soon from his premises in Pall Mall, he was counting among his regular customers the crowned heads of Europe, the knights of the stage and the magnates of commerce.

Louis Rothman had his own ideals and his own ideas on how to achieve them. His objective was perfection—and nothing less. Standards he set were permanently imprinted on the Rothmans family business when it became a public company with Sydney Rothman, son of the founder, as its Chairman.

Today, the Rothmans Group is a world-wide partnership of companies acknowledged as the most dynamic influence in post-war cigarette history.

"The best tobacco money can buy". In these six words is compressed an entire philosophy of cigarette manufacture. As Louis Rothman did in 1890, Rothmans, for all their technical resources, pride themselves on being tobacco men, first and foremost—tobacco men who can gauge quality by sight and touch and subtle intricacies of aroma. A quality cigarette is a cigarette made from quality tobacco and at the world's tobacco auctions Rothmans pay top prices to get that tobacco—the best that money can buy.



Quality is also a composite of many virtues, many vigils. The end objective is perfection in all things—standards that employ advanced and elaborate technical systems of control to maintain product quality at the highest level and use the most advanced research techniques for the continuous betterment of the product. The innovation and improvements that the Rothmans Group initiated and applied, have made cigarette history and changed the smoking habits of the world.

In 1952, using machines that were re-designed and rebuilt by its engineers expressly for the purpose, the Rothmans Group manufactured the first King Size filter cigarettes in the world. Today, as for many years past, Rothmans is by far the world's largest selling—most wanted—King Size Virginia cigarette. Apart from this major break-through the Rothmans Group can claim such notable "firsts" in the industry as

Behind the spectacular growth recorded by the Group is the Rothmans policy and practice of industrial partnership. In specific terms this means that the Group establishes its operations in a country on the basis of partnership; that the inhabitants of the country are given the opportunity of acquiring at least half of the shareholding, that the Chairman and the majority of Board Members are citizens of that country, and that profits are shared equally. What is moreover achieved is a multi-national partnership of technical, research and administrative resources, a common pool of knowledge and techniques shared by 49 modern factories in 23 countries on 6 continents.

Rothmans cigarettes are sold today in over 160 countries, on more than 100 airlines and 150 shipping lines. More than sixty per cent of Britain's export cigarettes emanate from the Rothmans Group, who produce internationally one out of every twenty cigarettes sold in the entire Free World.

None of this was achieved by tradition alone. But in the technological world of today, Rothmans of Pall Mall still stand firmly on a cornerstone of tradition and a code of standards—that quality and quality alone can lead the world.

Precisely the standards that the House of Rothmans was founded on more than three quarters of a century ago.

MEETING TO PROTEST PULP MILL

COWICHAN BAY — Business and sports representatives said today they are unimpressed with denials that a pulp mill will be built here in the near future.

Marina operator Peter Lambert said, "An expert with something in black and white" will prove at a meeting at Anchor Marina Coffee Shop at 8 p.m. the rumors are fact.

He declined to identify the "expert."

He was unimpressed by earlier reports by William Sloan of Victoria, president of Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd., that its subsidiary, "Pacific Logging Co. has no land on Cowichan Bay to build a mill.

NOTHING

"It has not discussed the area as a site for a pulp mill and neither it nor its associates has made agreements with anyone to build one," Sloan said.

Lambert said, "We are getting together now because we have been too late before."

"We hope to get the jump on them this time," he said.

Steps will be taken to stop any pulp mill from coming in "to ruin our salmon fishing as recreation."

Peter Hayward, secretary of Cowichan Valley Regional Board, said the board had received no representations from industry.

ROGER FOLEY
. . . 10 jumps an hour

DUNCAN — Roger Foley, 34, of 1190 Rock Street in Saanich, will attempt a world parachute record of 120 jumps at Duncan Airport June 29.

The current world record of 111 jumps in one day is held by an American.

"I will try for 10 jumps an hour using 20 chutes and utilizing as many people packing them as fast as they can," Foley said in an interview.

The packers are reliable people all well-known to him. He made three jumps in 18 minutes at the Duncan Fly-In here on Sunday.

Foley has only been jumping for four years and now makes a living instructing. He says age is no barrier to parachuting; it's a matter of courage, practice and good physical condition.

He keeps in shape by running and doing calisthenics.

•

The English-born former merchant seaman met his wife Virginia, a Duncan girl, while visitng Victoria. He liked both Virginia and Victoria so much he returned to stay two years later. The couple has one child.

Foley will jump from his own Cessna 180 at a legal minimum of 2,200 feet alternating three pilots, Bruce Gorle and Norman Bennett of Mill Bay and Joe Howse, president of Duncan Flying Club.

An official observer from Canadian Sport Parachute Association will be present.

Foley takes the job of parachuting for a living in a matter-of-fact manner. No pre-jump nerves or anxieties, he said.

His procedure will be to start at first light, run to the aircraft which will then fly to the minimum height, jump, pull the rip cord after two seconds and — hopefully — hit the airstrip target two minutes later.

"I will be unhooked from my parachute before I hit the ground," Foley said. "I run to where my chutes are stacked and strap another one on as I run for the plane again."

•

He will take a light meal break "after every 50 jumps" and in between only tea.

"Clear, sweet tea, lots of it, that's all I need when I'm jumping," Foley said.

Mill Bay Days Become Annual

MILL BAY — Mill Bay Days made a profit and will become an annual event, chairman Grant Garnett said today.

"We made a profit Sunday, I don't know yet how much, but most of it will be donated to the development of Kerry Park on the Shawnigan Lake Road," he said.

Brentwood College won the flying junior sailing event over Quamichan and Shawnigan Lake in that order. Mike Sommerfield and Linda Owen tied in the sabot races for sailors under 14. Ken Norie was third.

In rowing events Shawnigan beat Brentwood and George Bonner schools.

Doug Angus of Malahat was fastest male in the mass swim. Anita Smith of Duncan was fastest female; Susan Angus of Malahat was yougest swimmer and Gerry Patterson of Mill Bay was oldest.

Stewart Campbell of Brentwood College shot the largest fish—20½ pounds—in the skin-diving-fishing contest. Don Aikenhead of Duncan was second with a 9.4 pounder and Dennis Keeler of Victoria was third with a seven pound salmon.

OUTHOUSE RACING

Twelve and 14: Bob Saunders (boys); Linda Gibbs.

High point winner: Beth Gutenson, 33.

Brian Harrison was the best-dressed male in the costume contest; his wife was best dressed female. The Kiddle family was best in that category.

Barry Smith outrolled Guy Milligan and Rod Peter in the log-rolling event. In the same contest, juvenile division, David Scott won over Les Malbon and Bob Saunders.

At the Lake Cowichan loggers sports the British Columbia Forest Products team topped three others when it netted 90 points.

Ted Knott won power saw bucking with 90 horsepower or over; Art Neiser won the under-90 horsepower event.

Brian Brewer won the axe throw; Don Whiate won the pillow fight; choker setting was won by Brian Brewer and Ron Miles; Henry Monti won incline log-bucking; Harvey Livingston the log-burling; Jack Chargrow was fastest tree-climber and Joanne Palmer drove the fastest nails in the women's event.

Construction Bounces Back At Campbell R.

Value of permits so far is $1,772,288 compared to last year's total figure of $704,490 for the same period.

Assistant building inspector Warren Reay said he could not accredit the increase to any specific development but he felt the announcement of a new road from Kelsey Bay to Beaver Cove has created new incentive in the area.

Engineer Winner

BURNABY (CP) — Ron Drane, 32, a B.C. Telephone Co. engineer from Burnaby, Saturday won the regional championship of the Toastmasters International speaking contest in Salt Lake City, Utah. He now moves on to the international finals in Cleveland, Ohio, in August.

Canada Issue Surprisingly Popular

TORONTO (CP) — Bond dealers said Monday they were surprised and pleased at acceptance of the federal government's new bond issue.

"We were sold out of our allotment by 10:30 this morning," one Toronto dealer said.

Other bond houses had enough left of both the one-year 7¾ per cent and the nine-year 8 per cent issues to continue selling this week. But none expected to be left with bonds on their hands.

By the close of trading Monday, the 7¾ per cent issues was selling at a 15-cent premium over its 100 per cent issue price, for a yield of 7.60 per cent. It had traded at a 20 per cent premium at one point in the day.

The 8 per cent issue sold at it sissue price of par during the day, but one dealer forecast it too will be at a premium "after the newspaper advertisements have their effect and the public sees the 8 per cent coupon."

BOND YIELDS HIGHEST

The government offered the bonds, carrying the highest yields in Canadian government bond history, to refinance $300 million worth of bonds maturing July 1.

However, only $100 million of the new issue is being offered to the public. The Bank of Canada, which holds $175 million of the maturing bonds, has guaranteed to take up the remainder of the new $275, million issue.

One dealer speculated that perhaps the heavy selling is not surprising, despite the recent weak market for bonds, since about 2¼ times as much cash is coming into circulation from maturing bonds as is being put back into issues by investors.

In Montreal, dealers reported a 10 to 15 per cent premium on the one-year bond, but said sales of the nine-year issue were light. Dealers were bidding as low as $99.75 for it at the close of trading.

Although the federal government's two new refinancing issues created a flurry of activity on the Canadian bond market Monday, prices of secondary issues moved only in a narrow range.

Short-term Canadas were up between five and 10 cents. Traders said this gain was attributable to the success of the new one-year 7¾ per cent issue which sold at a 15 cent premium when trading closed. Long-term maturities lost about one-eighth of a point.

In the convertible corporate sector, Peace River 7½ per cent 1983 was down five to 95 bid and 100 asked and Dynasty Explorations 7 per cent 1982 three to 125 bid and 135 asked.

Day-to-day money to finance dealer inventories was in fair supply at 7 per cent. Three and six-month treasury bills closed at 7.10 and 7.25 per cent.

$ EXCHANGE

VICTORIA—Purchase of U.S. funds in terms of the Canadian dollar was quoted by the Royal Bank today at $1.07½ for cheques, $1.07⅝ for cash, $1.06⅝ for silver. Sales were $1.08¼ for cheques and $1.08⅜ for cash.

MONTREAL (CP)—The U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds was unchanged at $1.07 31/32. Pound sterling was down ⅛ to $2.57 15/16.

NEW YORK (CP)—The Canadian dollar was down 1/64 at .92⅝ in terms of U.S. funds. Pound sterling was down 3/32 at $2.38 15/16.

'Peril of Status Quo' Made Clear to American Bankers

By HOBART ROWEN

COPENHAGEN (WP) — Bank of America president Rudolph A. Peterson warned Monday night that an "incipient crisis" faces international money managers and political leaders if they fail to recognize "the peril of the status quo."

Peterson was opening the 16th annual monetary conference of the American Bankers' Association.

Judging from informal conversations over the past two days, he may have taken European participants in the conference by surprise with his strong suggestions for change in international monetary mechanisms.

Peterson said that there were three major questions to be answered in a year of crucial decision-making that lies ahead:

Will inflation—especially in the United States—be brought under better control? Will progress be made toward relieving the acute pressure on the international adjustment process (by which balance of payments deficits are corrected)? Will reserves be expanded in an orderly fashion?

AFFIRMATIVES NEEDED

The California banker (who is also chairman of this conference) said that "yes" answers were necessary and that negative answers "would spell further acute crises."

But while it is apparent that everyone here subscribes to curing U.S. inflation and all agree that the U.S. and British payments deficits are a bad thing, the Europeans are dragging their heels on the question of expanding reserves.

The problem comes up in a positive way with the almost-settled question of special drawing rights to be created within the International Monetary Fund. Sometimes called "paper gold," the SDRS are an artificially-created credit or reserve that will be used by central banks along with good and dollars to settle their international accounts.

DDEP SDRS DOWN

Having lost their fight to stop creation of this paper money altogether, some influential Europeans—a few of them are here in Copenhagen—are leading a last-ditch battle to keep the dollar amount of SDR creation to a minimum.

This and other questions will be hashed out here on an informal basis during the remainder of the meeting, which ends Friday. No official decisions will be made, but as Peterson said in his opening remarks, the ABA conference provides a means for a candid exchange of views.

Meanwhile, all participants are keeping an uneasy eye on Washington. The conferees are concerned not only by the crisis potential alluded to by Peterson, but by a man who wasn't invited to Copenhagen, Rep. Wright Patman (D-Tex.).

Patman has scheduled a hearing for Thursday on the boost in the U.S. prime bank lending rate to 8-½ per cent, having already made the more or less open suggestion that bankers constitute the modern-day version of robber-barons fleecing a helpless public.

Braves Like Bench, Bosox Have Reggie

By The Associated Press

While Hank Aaron, Orlando Cepeda and Felipe Alou, of Atlanta Braves, reclined in the dugout, the Braves' regular benchwarmers took the field and mauled Houston Astros 6-2 and 8-4 in a doubleheader Monday night.

"I've always said we had a good bench," said manager Luman Harris after the Braves boosted their lead in the National League's Western Division to 2½ games over Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants.

Elsehwere in the NL, San Diego Padres edged the Dodgers 3-2 in 13 innings, Cincinnati Reds outslugged the Giants 8-6, Pittsburgh Pirates nipped Chicago Cubs 9-8 and St. Louis Cardinals blanked Montreal Expos 3-0.

LUM CONNECTS

While Aaron and Cepeda were enjoying the game as spectators right fielder Mike Lum collected four hits and drove in a run and first baseman Tommie Aaron, Hank's brother, singled home a run in the first game and slammed his first homer of the season in the nightcap.

The key blows, however, were struck by Tony Gonzalez, acquired in a trade with San Diego during the weekend. Gonzalez smacked two home runs and drove in three runs in the opener as Phil Niekro became the major leagues' first 11-game winner.

Rookie Van Kelly, who went from Atlanta to San Diego in the Gonzalez deal, did the Dodgers in with a two-out, run-scoring double in the 13th, his first major league hit. Ed Spiezio and Ollie Brown homered for the Padres while Ken Boyer of the Dodgers sent the contest into overtime with a two-out pinch single in the ninth.

TWO HOMERS

Smith slammed two homers and drove in four runs to power the Red Sox to an 8-5 victory over Cleveland Indians.

They were his third and fourth homers in three games, but the first two blasts in that string were almost unnoticed because of the AL's other Reggie—Jackson.

Smith had a homer both Saturday and Sunday in the Red Sox' weekend slugfest with Oakland Athletics, but they received scant attention because the Oakland's Jackson cracked four homers and drove in 15 runs—including 10 in one game—during the series.

Jackson's production, meanwhile, took a big dip Monday night as the Athletics split a marathon doubleheader with Kansas City Royals. The Athletics won the opener 7-5 in 13 innings, then dropped the nightcap 3-2 in 12 innings.

Jackson managed only one hit—a 475-foot homer in the third inning of the opener—in 11 trips.

In other AL activity, Denny McLain moved to just a shade behind his 31-victory pace of last year as Detroit Tigers edged New York Yankees 3-2; Minnesota Twins battered California Angels 8-2, and Chicago White Sox stopped Seattle 8-3.

Poor-Fitting Football Gear Can Be Lethal

By STEVE HUME

A Vancouver physician slapped Canadian and American-style football Monday during sessions of the 18th convention of the Canadian Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation at the University of Victoria.

During a session dealing with athletic injuries, their diagnosis and treatment, Dr. Hector Gillespie tagged football as a sport where present protective equipment is as dangerous to the athlete as none at all.

"The helmets which football players use at present are quite lethal, and not only to the opponent," Dr. Gillespie said.

"The single football face-guard is very dangerous—it provides a long lever arm on which the back of the helmet can slice into the spine."

Dr. Gillespie also went after some of the other protective equipment worn by footballers.

Proper-Fitting Equipment Vital

"A poorly-fitting shoulder pad," he said, "is more likely to inflict injury on the athlete than no pad at all."

Athletes should be fully prepared by coaches before they are permitted to compete, Dr. Gillespie said.

He outlined an eight-point program for early prevention of injuries that included a complete and proper physical examination, advice for players regarding sleep habits, eating, drugs, alcohol, tea and smoking.

Injury preventing workouts, he said, should hinge around isometric exercises to build strength, isotonic exercises to increase agility, special exercises geared for particular and carefully-fitted equipment.

Increasing Challenge to Medics

He also called for proper playing areas, proper coaching for each sport, and special preparations for local parts of the body in relation to particular sports.

"The care of athletic injuries is an increasing challenge to all of us," Dr. Gillespie said.

"If we believe that the pursuit of athletics will help to promote a nation of healthy individuals, we should make every effort to aid in prevention and subsequent care of injuries which may occur."

He went on to cover emergency treatment on the field and in the locker room for blisters, lacerations, torn muscles, fractures, head injuries, facial fractures, neck injuries, pinched nerves and abdominal injuries.

"Diagnosis must be early, it must be accurate, and treatment must be started promptly," Dr. Gillespie said, "even more promptly than in the non-athlete if a 100 per cent recovery to competitive form is to be achieved."

Hemming Guides Greaves to Top

George Hemming's four-hit shutout powered Greaves Movers to a 3-0 victory over Gorge Hotel on Monday and the Senior Amateur Baseball League lead on the basis of percentage points.

Independents share the lead in games, one-half a game ahead of Transport Workers in the tight, three-team race for supremacy.

All Greaves' runs came in the fifth inning. John Yankoski opened scoring by stealing home. Gary Bishop later rode in on a single by Bob Bowles, who, in turn, crossed the plate on a fielders' choice.

Molsons Display Power

Larry Jay, who lost his shutout on an unearned run in the second inning, pitched Molsons to an 8-1 victory over Red Lion Inn during Major Men's Softball League action Monday at Central Park.

Molson victory moved to within five and a half games of leading Bate Construction.

'QUEEN OF DIAMONDS'

Pitching prodigy of softball, Rosie Beaird (standing) is mainstay of four-member touring team scheduled to play Victoria Vicettes senior women's team in exhibition game at Royal Athletic Park on Friday. Attractive 22-year-old headliner of "Queen and Her Maids" has 73 no-hitters to her credit. Game time is 7 p.m.

PELE OFFERED FORTUNE TO JOIN MEXICAN CLUB

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — A Mexican millionaire has offered super soccer star Pele a fortune to play on a Mexican team and leave Brazil, the newspaper Jornal da Tarde said Monday.

Emilio Azcarraga offered Pele about $850,00 and a mansion to live in if he accepted, the newspaper said. The paper said Azcarraga was "the richest man in Mexico" and needed Pele to beef up one of three losing teams he owns.

The newspaper said Pele was considering the offer but a 1966 ruling by the Brazilian Sports Confederation prevents national selection players from leaving the country to play for foreign teams.

Young Burnaby Squad First to Tackle Stars

Stakes will be high when the British Columbia baseball championship tournament opens Friday night at Royal Athletic Park.

On the line in the four-team competition will be a trip to Nova Scotia to represent the province in the baseball portion of the first Canadian Summer Games.

For Victoria All-Stars, selected from the five clubs in the city's senior amateur league, the big test is scheduled to arrive early in the double-loss-elimination tournament.

The Stars will launch hostilities in the three-day event, clashing with Burnaby Villa at 9 p.m. Friday in the opening game.

Promising to make the Mainland club a rugged rival is a roster comprised mainly of young Canadians who have been attending U.S. universities on athletic scholarships. Victoria manager Barry Harvey, although confident his club can finish on top, knows he has reason to fear the potential power of the Burnaby belters.

TRAIL AND KELOWNA

Trail and Kelowna, the other two squads in the scramble for the August hop to Halifax, tangle in the tourney's second game, Saturday at 10 a.m.

Kelowna has assembled an all-star outfit from the Okanagan senior league and Trail officials have formed their team around the best players in their area.

First-round losers continue play saturday at 2 p.m. and the first-round winners meet head on at 8 p.m.

Competition resumes Sunday morning at 10, when a second team will be eliminated in a battle between the winners of game No. 3 and the loser of game No. 4.

That will decide the once-beaten squad that will clash with the undefeated winner of game No. 4 at 2 p.m. Sunday in what could be the final game. If a seventh contest is required, it will follow at 8 Sunday night.

Craig Takes Clark Trophy

Johnny Craig boated a 14-pound seven-ounce spring salmon to win the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Angler's Association Chinook Club's annual Dr. Hugh Clark Trophy derby on Sunday.

Wyn Rusk placed second with a 6:12-pounder while C. Urlacher captured third prize with a catch that tipped the scales at 6:09.

Next derby on the VSIAA fishing calendar is the Sweetheart Derby, slated to run from daybreak to 2 p.m. next Sunday.

Colwood Uprising Nips Rams

Colwood Inn packed one more run than Hall Rams into the sixth inning to post a 9-8 victory in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game played Monday at Heywood Avenue Park.

Wicked Wedge Carries White To Early Lead

RICHMOND — Harry White wielded a wicked wedge Monday to lead the opening qualifying round of the British Columbia Amateur golf tournament with a sensational six-under-par 66.

Tom Tuell of Tacoma, at 33-36-69, was the only other player of 108 to break 70. Three members of last year's B.C. Willingdon Cup team were well back, with John Russell the closest at 73.

CUT TONIGHT

The field will be reduced to the top 60 and ties tonight.

"I felt everything going for me," said White, "I haven't played the course for a year but I did walk around last week and played some wedge shots."

Three were tied at 70 — Ron Fratkin, on his home course; Ken Gurney of Vancouver Point Grey and John Morgan of Vancouver Quilchena. Mike Buckley of Point Grey had a 71.

Russell was off to a hot start as he led the Willingdon Cup veterans. He went out in 32, the best nine holes of the day, but then his luck turned sour and he came off the back nine with a 41.

KERR HAS 75

Willingdon Cup teammates Ross Ellison of Point Grey and Art Donaldson of North Vancouver Capilano each shot 77 and Bert Ticehurst of Vancouver McCleery carded 78. Veteran John Johnston of Marine Drive shot 77.

Laurie Kerr and Gene Williams of Royal Colwood Club in Victoria carded 75 and 76, respectively, and were the only two Vancouver Island golfers in the top 50.

When the Victoria Sports Council goes shopping for celebrities to dress up the head table at next spring's sportsman dinner, they may do well to check out the neighborhood.

They may discover Paul Runyan.

One of the best-known teachers in the game and a two-time winner of the PGA championship, Runyan is moving to the new Sahalee club near Seattle.

Runyan is a pro's pro. Reigning at La Jolla, Calif., for the past 15 years, he is one of the masters the touring pros like to visit when their games go sour.

Calgary's Art Davis, who flew in to play a hotelmen's tournament at Colwood last week, reported that the talented amateur, Bob Wylie recently took a lesson from Runyan.

As a result, Wylie "only rarely played in the 70s" in recent weeks. Most of Wylie's scores have been in the 60s!

Same Art Davis recently watched British Amateur champion Mike Bonallack in action but feels that Wylie, playing as he has been, "could spot the British champion four strokes . . . and beat him"!

As of Monday, Wylie's handicap was plus two but "dangerously near" to becoming a plus three.

There's a good chance Wylie — holder of nine course records in Canada — may play in the B.C. Open at Uplands Aug. 14-17.

Arnold Palmer aroused some criticism against the U.S. Golf Association because he was forced to qualify for the 69th Open at Houston.

SHORT CHIPS: One of the more remarkable rounds of the weekend was credited to Ken Floyd . . . One of Earl Davies' summer-time assistants at Gorge Vale, Floyd scored 74-82—156 in the men's Mid-Island tournament at Nanaimo . . . He missed, by one pop, a chance to play off for top honors . . . The prize went to Bob MacArthur of Comox, who scored a par four on the first sudden-death hole to defeat Art Baker of Nanaimo and Percy Clogg of Powell River . . . The top three all finished the regulation 36 holes with 155 totals . . . Floyd had nine birdies in the 18 holes he played Saturday . . . Elsewhere along the way, however, Ken hit three balls out-of-bounds to finish with his 74 and the half-way lead . . .

Mount Brenton's Doug and Jim Cleough won the father-son division in the B.C. parent-child tournament at Shaughnessy on Sunday but the big prize, for the first time in history, went to a mother-son combination . . . Mrs. Stewart Cooper and her son, Donald, both members at Shaughnessy, scored a net 67 to become the first mixed pairing to take the big prize . . . Nanaimo's Jean Lusney scored an 81 to win the West Coast ladies' tournament at Port Alberni by a margin of five strokes . . . Bob Patterson, 67-8—59, Dave Pye, 73-13—60, and Mike Finlayson, 87-26—61, finished 1-2-3 in Cedar Hill's junior handicap championship . . .

The Cowichan Open (June 28-29) always attracts a limit entry but club captain Carl Norman says there are still a number of vacancies . . .

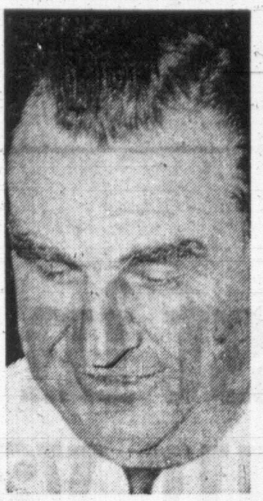
The Painters of Colwood, Vic and Onaugh, successfully defended the district's husband-and-wife championship on their home course Saturday . . . Hugh Thorburn won the men's low-gross prize with a fine 74 . . . City champion Dorothy Girolamo led the ladies with 81 . . . Clarence Mitchell, 75, scored his first hole-in-one after 40 years of trying . . . On Gorge Vale's 14th . . . Also counting aces were John Rimmington, on Oak Bay's eighth, and Jim Crockett, on the 18th at Cedar Hill . . . Victoria Club members took a commanding lead, 40-20, after the opening round of their annual home-and-home series with the Seattle Golf Club . . . The return match is at Seattle.

Bill Silverberg, father of professional Dick Silverberg, claimed top honors in Glen Meadows' Father's Day round with 87-18—69. . . Gordon Hay and Emile Beauchemin tied for low gross with 84s, but the prize went to the latter on the strength of a count-back . . . Bill Merluk continues to lead the field after three rounds of the Uplands handicap championship . . . Merluk posted his second straight net 71, after opening with a 69, for a 54-hole sum of 211 . . . Bunched at 214, three strokes behind, were Reg Elliott, Bill Champion, Keith Taylor and Mort Raels . . . They will wrap up the 72-hole test next Sunday . . . Incidentally, Gordon Pellow, president of Uplands, has been named to the board of directors of the PNGA . . .



SIGNING new, two-year contract to continue as manager and coach of Western Hockey League's Denver Spurs is former Victoria Maple Leaf pilot Rudy Pilous. He received pay hike despite fact Spurs finished last.

Argo Players Boycott Training Camp Opening

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts scheduled their first pre-season workout Monday night, but only the rookies and one player from the 1968 Eastern Conference football team turned out.

Most of the holdovers from last year's team boycotted the practice because of a dispute about pre-season compensation.

Grant McKee, the only veteran to turn out, was listed among the backfielders, receivers and linebackers who were to report for the workout.

Most of the holdovers worked on their own at a high school in suburban Port Credit prior to discussing their demands for pre-season pay.

The players want $60 a week while in training camp and an additional $40 for each player who makes the final 32-man roster. The players are asking that the additional $40 be made retroactive to the start of training camp.

COUNTERS PROPOSAL

Lew Hayman, club president, has countered with a $60-a-week offer for each player on the roster up to the date of the team's opening game in the Canadian Football League.

He has rejected what he referred to as threats from his veteran players contained in a letter Friday from Mike Wadsworth, spokesman for the players.

The letter, referring to the pre-season pay demands of the players, said in part:

"The Argonaut veterans decided individually and to the man, that they could not in all conscience depart from this last proposal, and should you decide against it their only recourse would be to not appear for any future practices until agreement on this basis is reached."

Hayman replied: "I am not prepared to accede to your demands or deal with you when you threaten to violate your commitment unless your demands are met. . . .

SOFTENS THREAT

"There is no provision in any of our contracts for pre-training expenses. Notwithstanding that, I advised you that I was prepared to make some provision in that respect even though I was under no legal obligation to do so."

Meanwhile, Argo coach Leo Cahill, who threatened Monday to fine players for each day they are absent "unless they have awfully pat excuses," appeared Monday night ready to cancel any disciplinary action if the problem is resolved and the players show up today.

Tourists Shade All-Stars

VANCOUVER (CP) — The touring Trinidad-Tobago field hockey team jumped to a 3-0 lead then held on to defeat a British Columbia Field Hockey Association squad 3-2 in an exhibition game Monday.

The Trinidad-Tobago team continues its exhibition tour here tonight before moving on to Victoria Thursday, for a match at 8:30 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

CRICKET

English Side Coasts to Win

MANCHESTER, England (Reuters) — England today coasted to an easy victory in the first cricket test match against the West Indies.

The last three West Indian batsmen were quickly dismissed for 18 runs to close the tourists' second innings at 275 for a total of 422 runs—only nine more than England's first innings total of 413.

England's opening batsmen Geoff Boycott and John Edrich had no trouble in scoring the 10 required runs to give England victory by 10 wickets.

The second match of the best-of-three series opens June 26 at the Lords cricket ground.

England was always on top after the first day of the five-day match and only the weather—which cut 4½ hours from the scheduled six hours of play Monday — seemed likely to prevent a convincing win.

At Derby, abandoned, rain. Oxford University 110 and 31 for 1; Derbyshire 303 for 4 declared.

At Dublin, Scotland beat Ireland by 82 runs. Scotland 238 and 132 for 7 declared; Ireland 144 and 144.

At Ilford, Nottinghamshire 171 and 228 for 6; Essex 176.

At Bournemouth, Hampshire 337 for 5 declared; Glamorgan 256 for 7.

At Taunton, Surrey 310 and 143 for 4; Somerset 164.

METS OBTAIN CLENDENON FROM EXPOS

By The Associated Press

Two major swaps were made Sunday in the closing hours before the trading deadline for major league baseball teams.

New York Mets got slugger Donn Clendenon from Montreal Expos in exchange for four minor league players. Boston Red Sox traded catcher Joe Azcue to California Angels for catcher and utility infielder Tom Satriano.

Montreal had obtained Clendenon in the expansion draft in October. The Mets gave up infielder Kevin Collins and three right-handed pitchers, Steve Renko, Jay Carden and Dave Colon.

Namath Hires A Scrutineer

NEW YORK (AP) — Professional football Commission Pete Rozelle's office said Monday the fact that Joe Namath has hired a former FBI agent to police his restaurant does not change Namath's non-playing status in professional football.

Namath, who played as quarterback for New York Jets up to the Super Bowl championship in January, retired from pro football June 6 after Rozelle informed him he would either have to sell his interest in the restaurant Bachelors III or face football suspension.

A police source has described the upper East Side lounge as "crawling with the worst sort of characters."

Jim Kensil, Rozelle's top assistant, said Monday that "before there is any change in the situation, the commissioner still says he wants to sit down and talk with Joe. So far, there has been no contact either from Joe or his attorneys."

Kensil added that even if Namath sold his restaurant, he still would have to sit down with Rozelle before being allowed to resume his football career.

Namath was reportedly scheduled to meet with Jets President Phil Iselin Monday but was called to Miami on other business.

Symphony Society Boasts Big Season Ticket Gain

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Season subscription renewals for Victoria Symphony Society's 1969-70 season stand to date at 1,350, a considerable advance on the figures for previous years at this time.

The information was contained in the society's annual reports, Monday night, most of which revealed a bright picture of the orchestra's current position.

Thirty-seven musical events were provided by the orchestra in the past season. They were attended by 39,000 people.

There was a slight drop in single ticket sales for the regular concerts but season subscribers were up by nearly $1,500.

Ticket sales for special events, including the symphony-sponsored opera and ballet, were $8,000 up over the previous year.

As a result of the increase in attendance, guarantors will be required to put up less than half their commital of $100.

CRITICAL STAGE

Musical director and conductor Laszlo Gati said that a critical stage had been reached in the symphony's affairs with the need to progress through acquiring a few more professional players.

There was also a need, he said, to reach out more positively to children and young people and counter the destructive influence of much of the rock type music by giving them opportunity to hear and become familiar with the classics and good contemporary music.

He felt that the time had come for the community to realize what the symphony was doing for the community, instead of the other way round.

The president, G. A. Neely, in his annual report, pointed out that the orchestra demonstrably had won the goodwill of this and other communities on Vancouver Island where it has performed during past seasons.

He thanked the members of the orchestra for their dedication and Maestro Gati for his broad efforts on behalf of the orchestra.

Elected to the board of directors were J. Barraclough, I. R. Burrows, Mrs. Mary Canty, Dr. Charles Clayton, E. V. Davies, C. N. Driedger, M. Ellis, John Hodgins, Mr. Kilshaw, A. J. Longmore, M. C. Manning, K. J. Horgaard, Mrs. T. W. Mayne, T. L. McMaster, Lieut.-Cmdr. S. E. Soward and Mrs. H. Thirlwall.

Board members having one year to serve of a two-year term are Dr. J. F. K. English, Brian Gingell, G. A. Neely, Mrs. J. Ingram Smith, Mrs. J. Gillespie, Brian Travers Smith, A. J. Saunders, T. E. Watkins and Dr. L. Austin Wright.

VANCOUVER POLLUTION STUDY BID APPROVED

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said Monday he has agreed to a request by Vancouver Mayor Tom Campbell for a continual study of the pollution level in waters off Vancouver beaches.

The health minister said it would not be necessary to set up a special group to carry out the study, request Sunday by the mayor.

Mr. Loffmark said the study was mainly to "reassure the mayor that Dr. (Gerald) Bonham's assessment is accurate".

The mayor requested the study following charges by provincial Liberal leader Dr. Pat McGeer, that Vancouver beaches were not safe for swimmers.

Dr. Bonham, the city's medical officer of health, denied the charges and maintained the beaches were perfectly safe.

School Drama's Advantage Creation of Imaginations

CALGARY (CP) — Drama courses in schools may not produce tomorrow's Hollywood stars, but they can develop more sensitive, imaginative people.

This is the message Brian Way, a leading British exponent of creative drama, brought to a recent convention here of the Canadian Child and Youth Drama Association.

Mr. Way says child drama should concern itself with the all-round development of children as people and should help them develop the arts of social living and communication.

"Drama can give a child a chance to release his own resources as a human being, to fulfil his aspiration to be the best human being he can be."

A play for children performed by professional actors at the convention illustrates the point. The play, Chinook, written for six-to-nine-year-olds by Paddy Campbell of Calgary, has the characters appeal to the young audience for help and advice.

The aim is to emphasize improvisation rather than strict adherence to script. Children can take on the playwright's imaginative role and work to advance the action of the story which they are helping create.

Mr. Way says less emphasis should be placed in child drama on getting a production on stage in front of an outside audience.

OPEN UP GRADUALLY

Practical sessions as conducted by Mr. Way generally start with a lot of control and intervention, and gradually open up to allow freer improvisation.

"Let's drop this funny word free drama, meaning licence. In creative drama we are gradually paying out the rope of discipline to the children, as their self-discipline gradually increases," he says.

He starts by asking everyone to be silent, and to listen to any noises they can hear from outside the building, and to the sound of their own breathing.

"Halft of life is sensory experience, and we must practise using our senses," he comments. "how many of the meals you eat in a month do you actually taste?"

Next he has the children break up into groups of five and arrange themselves into "still photographs" of situations he describes briefly. This means the people have to work together imaginatively, within the framework set for them.

From there the sessions open up into dances improvised singly or in groups to interpret a piece of music, and drawings by each dancer to try to convey how the dance felt to him.

Sunset Ceremony Planned Tonight

The Queen's Own Rifles of Canada Cadet Corps will perform a sunset ceremony on the lawns of the Legislative Buildings tonight.

Spectacular Opening

Next season's series for Vancouver's Playhouse Theatre Company will have a spectacular opening with the production of Peter Shaffer's Royal Hunt of the Sun, the play in which Canadian actor Christopher Plummer starred on Broadway.

Artistic manager David Gardner also has announced the North American premiere of a British hit, Events While Guarding the Bofors Gun.

Schirra Signed For News Team

NEW YORK (Reuters) — The Columbia Broadcasting system announced Monday it has hired veteran astronaut Walter Schirra to join the news team reporting the lunar landing flight of Apollo 11.

Schirra, a U.S. Navy captain, will leave the space program and the navy July 1 and will begin working with CBS correspondent Walter Cronkite to prepare for the July 16 launch.

Schirra was one of the original seven U.S. astronauts and flew Mercury, Gemini and Apollo missions. His last flight was in October with the earth orbital flight of Apollo 7.

Schirra said after that flight he would leave the space program.

Language Bill Debate Could Open Tory Wounds

By ALEXANDER FARRELL

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government's official languages bill reaches showdown stage in the Commons this week after a comparatively swift and harmonious passage through a House committee.

The critical question is whether Conservative opponents of the bill will make use of their last chance to fight it on the Commons floor. If they do, they may be able to frustrate the government's high hopes of enacting it into law this summer.

But they would also be defying party leader Robert Stanfield and picking the scarcely-healed scars of party division on the issue.

Mr. Stanfield has taken a firm position in support of the principle of the bill, as have many other members of his party and all New Democratic and Creditiste MPs.

STANFIELD
. . . in support

The bill is scheduled to come up in the Commons Wednesday. It could get final reading Thursday and be sent on to the Senate immediately.

It is a considerably-amended version that returns to the Commons, but no changes were made in the fundamental meaning and purposes of the bill by the all-party special committee that approved each of its 41 clauses.

It still aims to make English and French the official languages of the federal administration and to require federal government departments and agencies and Crown corporations to provide services in both languages in selected areas that will be called bilingual districts.

Most of the amendments were actually put forward by the government through committee member Jean-Charles Cantin (L—Louis-Hebert), parliamentary assistant to Justice Minister John Turner.

They were the fruit of Mr. Turner's long consultations with provincial attorneys-general between first and second reading in the Commons.

One amendment eliminated the word "appearing' at a place where it had invited complaints from the four western provinces and Nova Scotia that the federal government would be interfering in the provincial administration of justice.

And Saskatchewan had vowed it would fight Ottawa in court if the clause were not amended.

The clause originally stated that every court would have to ensure that "any person appearing or giving evidence before it" in criminal proceedings could be heard in either English or French.

It was argued that this covered lawyers and court officials as well as witnesses and meant that every court would have to be capable of functioning fully in either language.

But Mr. Turner, who attended most committee meetings, said the amended clause would still achieve its essential purpose.

WITNESS HAS RIGHT

It would give a French-speaking witness an absolute right to an interpreter in criminal proceedings anywhere in Canada. At present, a judge may deny a request for an interpreter if he thinks the witness understands English.

In Quebec, the right of any person to use either French or English in criminal proceedings is already guaranteed by the British North America Act.

The official languages bill proposes to allow criminal courts across the country to order proceedings conducted in either French of English. Mr. Turner said this would fill a gap uncovered by a recent ruling of the New Brunswick Appeal Court, which found that a court in that province had no authority to allow a trial to proceed in French.

However, under another amendment put through committee on government initiative, this particular section cannot come into effect in any province until the province says it can.

Some committee members, in particular Douglas Hogarth (L—New Westminster), accused Mr. Turner of giving in to the provinces. Mr. Hogarth said some provinces will never implement this section.

Mr. Turner said he was not going to speculate. The point had to be conceded to the provinces in order to win their support.

DENIES 'SELLOUT'

As the temperature rose in the hottest meeting of the entire committee session, the justice minister denied to Mr. Hogarth that there had been a "sellout." He had reached a "reasonable accommodation" with the provinces without any sacrifice of principle.

Little friction was generated by any exchange between Mr. Turner and opposition MPs on the committee.

The Conservative members and David Lewis (NDP—York South) presented amendments, some of which were accepted, but their starting point was always support of the bill in principle. They approached the entire discussion in a conciliatory spirit.

None of the 17 Conservatives who voted against the bill on second reading in the Commons was on the committee. The bill got second reading May 27 by 197 votes to 17.

During the committee study June 3 to 11, Mr. Lewis often stressed the importance of recognizing the doubts and fears of skeptics and opponents of the bill.

He said the bill is still an unpopular and misunderstood measure among many Canadians. Every pain must be taken to make it clear to them that bilingualism was not being shoved down their throats.

It was for this reason that he persuaded the committee to accept a clause making it expressly clear that no criminal charges can be laid against a person for infractions of the bill.

The responsibility for carrying out the provisions of the bill will rest with institutions of the federal government, not with individual public servants and private citizens.

How, then, will the institutions be punished when need arises? Mr. Turner told the committee the punishment will be public disclosure that the institutions are not respecting language rights.

PELLETIER IN CHARGE

State Secretary Gerard Pelletier will be responsible for administration of the bill, once it becomes law. The actual administrator will be an official languages commissioner, whose wide powers to investigate complaints are set out in the bill.

Mr. Pelletier made the point to the committee, as did Mr. Turner, that the commissioner will be merely an investigator, not a prosecutor or a judge. His only power would be to report his findings to the head of the department concerned.

In cases where he believed no appropriate action had been taken in response to a justified complaint, he could report the matter to Parliament. He would also have to make an annual report to Parliament on his activities.

The commissioner would have the right to drop an investigation if he decided the complaint was frivolous, groundless or malicious.

The committee accepted an amendment by Melvin McQuaid (PC—Cardigan) that would require the commissioner to tell the complainant why he was dropping it, however. Mr. McQuaid argued that nothing frustrates a citizen more than a bureaucrat who does something without giving any reason.

The commissioner and his staff will function within the national capital region and the bilingual districts, which will probably be established in all provinces except Newfoundland and British Columbia.

These districts will be areas in which the so-called official minority, either French-speaking or English-speaking, makes up at least 10 per cent of the population.

In addition, areas in which federal services have customarily been available in both languages will be declared bilingual districts even if the official minority doesn't reach 10 per cent.

Quebec City will be a bilingual district, for example, although its English-speaking minority has shrunk to about five per cent, Mr. Pelletier said.

The state secretary also drew attention to the fact that bilingual districts cannot be eliminated, although their boundaries can be changed.

B.C. Centennial Committee Seeks Celebration Ideas

It's time to plan for another Centennial.

1971 is the 100th anniversary of B.C.'s entry into Confederation and the Centennial '71 committee is looking for new ideas on ways to celebrate the event.

"We would like ideas by the dozen, by the score," said L. J. Wallace, deputy provincial secretary and general chairman of the committee. "Previous centennial celebrations were so successful because people throughout the Province became actively involved.

"We're looking for privince-wide ideas, community suggestions, individual and personal plans."

The house on its narrow lot would win no beauty prizes. Its roof peaks sharply at the front over its two stories, then ducks to a lower ridge toward the rear. But it stands sturdily with its basement rooted in the disputed earth of its Rose Street niche, and its simulated brick outer covering helps insulate its walls.

I called on Monday morning. Miss Janet Telfer came around from the rear while I was still fumbling with the old-fashioned gate latch. Her face looked puffy, as if she had been crying.

No, she told me, she was sorry, but it would be impossible to talk with her mother, Mrs. Catherine S. Telfer. She had a heart condition, and any mention of expropriation distressed her so much that the two had agreed to avoid all possible discussion of their plight.

At this point, Mrs. Telfer came to stand in the doorway. As you know, she is a widow in her ninety-first year. She looked out for a moment, then took her white hair and her thin white face indoors.

Her daughter, 61 years old herself, mentioned cataracts. "She doesn't see properly," she said, her tone worried-apologetic.

The property that they still determinedly regard as home has been the object of a legalized snatch. It has been taken over for eventual resale by their city to commercial interests.

★

If you look on such a high-handed act as barely distinguishable from banditry, let me remind you again that it has the sanction of city law. Further, expropriation is no respecter of persons.

If you live in an area that may one day be judged better-suited to profit-making commercial use than to residential occupancy, it could happen to you.

That's what's been happening in the Rose-Blanshard. That's what happened to the woman in the doorway and her daughter, telling their troubles by the gate that couldn't keep trouble out.

Miss Janet Telfer claims harassment. She says that she was warned earlier in her unwanted dealings with Victoria's city government against attempting to sell the place.

"I was told if my mother did so," she said, "the result could be a spell behind bars."

The city, however, has chosen to be generous, according to its lights.

For the present at least, the two women can remain undisturbed in the house.

They are small houses, culled from the real estate multiple listings. William Hooson, assistant to the city manager, supplied me with the addresses. All are occupied now, but as seen from the outside, they did not strike me as a match for the expropriated house on Rose Street.

Miss Telfer and her mother are not rich, but they have a modest income from investment. They have spent a good deal on that place. In demonstration, Miss Telfer fetched out a picture album. It contained color shots of nicely-furnished rooms.

Mother and daughter turned those other houses down.

"We weren't interested," Miss Telfer told me. "What my mother wants to do is live here until she dies."

Lawyer Herbert Matthews has put forward a demand for $50,000 as the widow's price for a home appraised for the city at $10,000. Was the intent to gouge?

No, Janet Telfer said. It was to discourage the city from further offers. Then, perhaps her mother would be permitted to die in what she still considers her home.

The federal government is studying this whole matter of expropriation. I hope one of its decisions will be that no home may be taken over for the benefit of any commercial or industrial concern.

The widow Telfer's story makes plain that such a reform is badly needed.

THEY CAN END THE CONFUSION SAYS PROFESSOR

Teachers Called Key to Sex Education

By STEVE HUME

The color slide flicked from an unborn baby to the New York skyline, then switched to a rapid montage of a flower, and embryo, archaic ruins and an old man.

The sequence, flashed on the walls of the University of Victoria's darkened gymnasium, continued for eight quiet minutes.

"We are speaking not only about sex education this morning, but about life in general," Dr. George Szasz told the hushed audience.

He warned that the community, caught in a dilemma over how to instruct its youth in sexual behavior, is ignoring the school teacher while turning to less qualified professionals for advice and assistance.

The Hungarian-born member of the medical faculty at the University of British Columbia was addressing delegates to the 18th convention of the Canadian Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

"The public, in its search for community sex educators, has not turned to its school teachers for help, and has not yet given a clear mandate to its teachers to deal with issues relating to sexuality in the schoolrooms."

He said parents have failed to acknowledge that classrooms are miniature communities where the maleness or femaleness of the teacher is in itself a potent sex educational experience for the students.

"It is a curious paradox that the public is ready to entrust its children for over 25 hours per week to close personal contact with the teacher, yet it does not recognize him as a moulder of the male and female roles of children."

The community has, instead, turned to the clergy, legal and health professionals, and public health agencies, when in actuality they are no more competent to help than most laymen, he said.

"Medical, nursing, social work, clergy or law students have rarely had the chance to study the nature of human sexual behavior, and their experiences with events of human sexuality have been limited to personal experiences and to those shared with them by their friends, clients or patients."

Although "social circumstances have changed over the years, and with them the public moral attitude, official moral codes have not changed appreciably over the last 2,000 years.

"The official institutions of the community have not kept p with currently changing or ceptable human values."

Many parents, however, are alizing that suppression of nformation about sexual natters does not bring about he happiness it was supposed o create, but they remain nfused by offical standards nd their own changing values.

But he said parents, despite eir confusion, still wish to ass onto their children the aditional mores of the social ackgrounds, and "sensing a egree of hypocrisy, children o not wish to listen to rents."

"And parents are now unure of what their children hould learn of the moral ode, wish that some institution take over and give irections in such matters."

★ ★ ★

The confusion has split the community three ways, he said with three definable attitudes:

- Let The School Do It—those who wish to institutionalize sex education in the school system.
- None of The School's Business—those who feel only the home and the church are fit places for this type of education.
- It's Everyone's Business—those who want courses in school which are relevant to human life and sexuality without being physiology and anatomy lectures.

He said the first two of these groups have negative approaches which would likely be more harmful than anything else.

He said the community should pursue the third path to "raise a new generation of citizen who will be in the possession of as much knowledge of themselves and others so that the emotionalism surrounding sexual aspects of human behaviour can be reduced."

Dr. Szasz proposed courses dealing with physical, social man from conception to death, courses dealing with man and his interaction with the social and natural environment, and still others concerning cultural origins, social institutions, and the sexual behaviors of other peoples and other times.

He said a teacher could function as a resource person willing to discuss events of life as they arise, as a specialist in fields of biology and physiology, and as a "forecaster" concerned with interpreting trends as they emerge in school populations.

Fire Line Action Hot, Heavy As Campfire Permits Cancelled

More than 1,500 B.C. Forest Service and industrial personnel are battling 197 forest fires raging throughout the province today.

In a situation described as "critical" by the forest protection service, all campfire permits in the Vancouver Fire District have been cancelled as of midnight tonight.

The province has also issued an order curtailing lumbering operations to early morning hours when dew provides some safeguards against the fire hazards.

"We are experiencing in mid-June conditions that are normal for the peak danger period in July and August," said a forest protection spokesman.

In the Vancouver district there are 15 fires burning. Throughout most of the province the fire hazzard remains high to extreme, the spokesman said.

Men battling the blazes are using water bombers, helicopters, tractors, shovels, but fires are becoming more difficult to contain with many of them leaping the fire guards.

CITY QUITS PLAYING IT COOL

"The temperature at the airport is indicative of the situation throughout the whole Saanich peninsula," McQuarrie said.

The Gonzales reading really only applies to areas lying close to the water, as it is influenced by south-westerly and south-easterly winds coming off Juan de Fuca Strait.

Victorians can expect more of the same hot spell, he said.

Elsewhere on the Island, two heat records fell. Comox noted a new high of 93 Monday. The previous record was 87 in 1958. Nanaimo temperatures rose to 91, two degrees higher than the 1958 record of 89.

On the mainland, six other heat records were broken. Terrace recorded its tenth day running of record-breaking heat, and in Lytton, though records weren't broken, 14 straight days of temperatures over 90 have been noted. Vancouver's high for Monday was 82.

McQuarrie said there was less difference between temperatures recorded at Gonzales and the airport because of the absence of cooling winds along the shore which always included Gonzales.

MURDER HEARING JULY 14-15

A preliminary hearing has tentatively been set for July 14 and 15 in the case of a Colwood man charged with the non-capital murder of his wife.

The body of Catherine Josephine Munning, 36, was brought to the Colwood RCMP office June 2. Police said her death was apparently caused by carbon monoxide poisoning.

Ask The Times

Q. What is the world's record, and what is the Australian record for the number of sheep shorn in a normal working day? —P.D.R.

A. The world's record is held by Colin Bosher, 32, who machine-sheared 565 second-shear Romney and Perendale ewes in eight hours, 53 minutes at Awakino, North Island, New Zealand, on April 13, 1964. The Australian record is held by Kevin Baar, who machine-sheared 327 Merinos in Victoria in seven hours, 40 minutes in 1957. Australian trade commission officials report that a shearer who tops 300 is called a dreadnought, one who consistently passes 200 is a gun, and one who shears the most at any one time is a ringer.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

CHELL

Because School Is Boring Hookey Is Understandable . . .

Part of the blame for absenteeism from schools lies with the length and tedium of the school year, school superintendent Joseph Chell told a meeting of the Greater Victoria school board Monday.

"I think a lot of the reasons behind absenteeism and truancy are that these kids could do the job in half the time if we'd only let them.

"I think in education we've just about reached the point where we can no longer afford to give 200 days a year to each student."

Chell's remarks came in his final report as superintendent to the board. A. J. Longmore will take over superintendent duties in July.

He cautioned trustees to avoid getting bogged down in trivial matters, but to concentrate on education policy.

★ ★ ★

. . . And So Are Tearful Graduations

It's gimmicky and a waste of money and it's put on every year because parents want it.

It also brings a lump to your throat.

School board chairman Dr. C. B. Jameson asked the trustees what they thought of holding the recognition ceremonies in the afternoon to somehow cut down on the cost and glamor of the affairs.

"Getting out high school may mean a lot when you're 18 or 19," he said, "but it probably doesn't mean as much a year later.

★ ★ ★

Trustee Peter Bunn said every year a greater number of students do not bother to take part in the recognition ceremonies.

"I think the parents want it more than the students.

"I think it's just a gimmicky thing that makes the haberdashers and the photographers rich."

Dr. Victor Rogers said when he attended school in England the only recognition he got was a letter in the mail.

"I would love to have had something like this, but I didn't."

John Porteous said it was a moving experience to see young men and women dressed in formal attire.

"You get kind of a lump in your throat when you see these young people. Most students can afford to chip in a few dollars to buy a graduation suit."

C. C. Wyatt said there was "standing room only" at a grad ceremony he attended a few weeks ago at a local high school.

★ ★ ★

Superintendent Joseph Chell ended the discussion by reminding the trustees graduation is a matter decided by individual schools, and cannot be influenced by the school board.

Policing Sought For Pubs

Oak Bay Group Protests Rowdiness At Beach Hotel

By SUSAN RILEY

The Oak Bay Beach Hotel's neighbors, concerned about noise and unpleasant behavior in the hotel's parking lot, have suggested supervision of all liquor outlet parking lots in British Columbia.

A brief, signed by 31 residents of Beach Drive and the Satellite Apartments, was presented by Mrs. A. H. Bindon, 2747 Satellite, in Victoria Law Courts this morning, to the B.C. commission investigating liquor laws.

The liquor commission hearings are in their second and final day here.

Mrs. Bindon complained that noisy cars leaving the hotel parking lot between 1 a.m. and 1:30 a.m. were keeping neighbors up.

"We'd like to request employees leave as soon as possible after the bar closes and park their cars a distance away," she said.

URINATING OUTDOORS

She also complained of Snug patrons urinating in the parking lot.

Appeals to owners of the lounge brought no action, she said.

She invited the three-man commission, consisting of Judge C. W. Morrow, Most Rev. Martin Johnson and Teamster's union executive Ed Lawson, to her home some night to see the situation for themselves.

"It wouldn't be a dinner party though. The fun and games don't begin until after 10:30 p.m."

She says the group does not feel they can change the hours of operation of the bar—although they would like it to close at midnight Friday and Saturdays and at 11:30 other nights—but she asked the commission to look closely at liscensing bars in residential areas in the future.

"We shouldn't have to accept this noise in a residential area," she said.

She also complained about the windows of the Snug, a lounge in the hotel, being left open in the summer and asked if some other form of air-conditioning could not be found.

She said noise at night is "terrific" and called excessive noise "another form of pollution."

Lawson asked why owners of the co-operative apartment building had moved there in the first place since the hotel was built about 12 years before the apartment.

She said when she moved in the Snug was a quiet, charming place and the parking lot was a large garden. There was little noise or disturbance.

A MISNOMER

Judge Morrow said he could remember the Snug in the 50s when it was a "glorified living room" and "so quiet you could hear a pin drop."

He said it resembles more a cocktail lounge now and suggested that "it's still called the Snug but that may be a misnomer."

Norman Wright, president of the University of Victoria's Alma Mater Society, criticized the principle of legislation which treats alcohol as immoral instead of treating it as any other substance covered in Food and Drug Act.

In a brief prepared for presentation today he said the prohibition of liquor ads in student publications is a denial of freedom of the press.

Hospital List 'Acceptable'

Priorities for spending $9.3 million on 600 extended care hospital beds in the Greater Victoria area have been "approved in principle" by the British Columbia Hospital Insurance Services.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said from Vancouver this morning there are some minor technical points to iron out but that "all the major proposals are acceptable to me."

On Oct. 26, 1968, owner electors in Greater Victoria solidly supported a multi-million referendum for construction of extended care beds in the area.

Early this year BCHIS approved a 200-bed extension for the Gorge Road Hospital and 20 beds at Lady Minto, Ganges. The balance of the priorities went to the BCHIS May 15 after a sometimes bitter debate at the regional-level regarding bed siting.

The Victoria board has been recommending in good fashion," said Loffmark. "Full authorization to construct the beds will be handed down before the fall."

PESSIMISTIC

Loffmark said the fall was the target date for a second referendum pertaining to acute care beds. It could be for in excess of $20 million.

Loffmark said hospital authorities in Vancouver were unduly pessimistic if they believed the government will veto or revamp a list of priorities for $51 million in hospital construction.

A nine-man advisory board to the Greater Vancouver Regional Hospital District has threatened to resign if a list of priorities they have drawn up is found unacceptable.

Dr. Harry L. Purdy, chairman of the advisory board feels there has been undue delay on the part of the province in reaching a decision on Vancouver priorities.

Loffmark said the red tape of the past has been cut to a large degree with the establishment of fiscal targets and architectural standards.

He said a cost control group with the primary duty of establishing quick and easy communications between regional board and his department will be announced soon.

Hovercraft Start Here Still In Dark

Pacific Hovercraft will start service between Vancouver and Victoria later this year.

But it has not decided exactly when the service will start, said a company official.

He was commenting on a Canadian Press report that this service will begin in July, terminating at an undisclosed base in Victoria.

"We are hoping to have this service in July but we can't be definite," the official said.

He confirmed that Sidney is the proposed terminal here. In Vancouver it will be in the downtown area.

Asked where in Sidney the hovercraft will land, the official said "I think possibly the same as in the Air Canada strike, up on the beach. But this terribly tentative."

Pacific Hovercraft announced this morning it will enter Arctic service under charter to the federal mines department this month supplying bases on ice flows. It will use an SRN-6 craft which can carry 17,000 pounds, or 33 passengers.

Gladys' Letter Will Decorate a Wall

By PENNY SAVER

Gladys stretched her arm to it's full length and shook it vigorously. "It's not the length of the letter; it's the length of each line. Take it from an old, and almost dead, hand—when writing letters on posters, divide the space in half, or even quarters before you begin. Twenty or thirty inches is far too long for a single lazy sweep of the arm."

"Why write letters on posters at all?" I asked. "Because I haven't written this person for a long time. I owe her a lot of information and some sort of gift as an apology. The poster is both the gift and the medium. Saves mailing costs."

The poster Gladys was using for writing paper is one of the two new Victoria posters. I learned about the first of these a week ago, while it was still on the presses, and by Thursday both were on the market. Both cost $3 and are different enough to satisfy two different kinds of poster lovers.

The poster I first saw has a royal blue background setting off a compressed picture of Victoria set in a silver frame. The vantage point is the railway tracks just over the Johnson Street bridge and many of the buildings have been turned around to face the viewer. Despite this they are, with two exceptions, in the right place in relation to each other and present a picturesque reminder of what a tourist might remember after three days in the city. Victoria is written over the city in silver and blue.

This poster is clean, crisp and cool. The choice of colors and the artist's style both contribute to the feeling of controlled elegance. The other poster is the complete opposite.

Hot Colors

It uses hot colors, red-orange and yellow. The word Victoria grows out of the aerial view of the area like a parade of odd-shaped mushrooms. Points of interest are sketched in and clearly labeled and are, for the most part, correctly placed if compressed. There are one or two goofs I think could have been avoided, but since I couldn't draw a poster if I tried, I have no right to complain. The artist's style is loose and deliberately cluttered, making the whole poster seethe with action.

Rack for Roasts

When Jayne was married, she was given an electric fry pan with a lid so deep it could cover a full-sized roast. She didn't like to use it for roasts, however, because the meat sat right on the bottom of the pan, simmering in it's own fat. Recently she found a $1.25 solution in the form of a small rack. Only nine inches square, this rack fits easily into her fry pan. Now she scarcely needs her oven at all. It can also double as a cooling rack when she is baking. "I even use it for steaks and fish—things I used to fry. With this rack underneath, they don't stick and crisp on the bottom."

If you would like to know where to find these items, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Boiled Beef Dinner Economical And Easy

(So-called boiled dinners are never boiled, but simmered.)

Four to 5 lbs. corned beef, water just to cover, ¼ cup vinegar, 2 bay leaves, 6 whole peppers, 1 garlic clove (optional), 1 head cabbage, peeled whole carrots, peeled small white turnips, peeled whole potatoes.

Bring water covering corned beef to boil. Reduce heat to simmer. Add garlic, onions, vinegar and seasonings. Cover, cook until meat is tender (about 40 minutes per pound), or pressure cook 14 minutes per pound at 15 pounds pressure.

In last 45 minutes of cooking time, or last 15 minutes of pressure cooking time, add potatoes, carrots, turnips. Cut cabbage into inch-wide wedges, lengthwise, place on top of meat and other vegetables.

(Placed on top of other foods, cabbage wedges steam-cook and so preserve color, flavor and food value.)

The U-shaped design of this house made it relatively simple to create a sheltered patio area that does not look abandoned without people. The beams across the open are to create a pattern of light and shade, while the plants maintain a garden atmosphere. Bricks and pebbled concrete are used for the floor. The patio is bordering on a pool. (Conrad Buff photo.)

House Encloses Patio Area

Whether or not you are a devotee of living outdoors, you must admit there are times when such facilities make it fairly easy to entertain more people than you could accommodate indoors. And you do not have the mental strain of worrying about spilled beverages and dropped cigarettes. Therefore, why not plan your home so that you can use an outdoor area when you like, without having it look abandoned without people.

Such a home, designed by architects Buff and Hensman, AIA, appears here. Basis of the whole idea is the U-shape floor plan in which one or two rooms extend across the front, with a wing down each side. Usually kitchen and dining facilities occupy one wing, with the bedrooms in the other. By its very design the house shelters an outdoor space without involving any additional construction.

However, in this instance, beams across the open area add to the feeling of shelter and create a handsome light and shade pattern on the patio surface. Bricks and exposed aggregate, concrete with a pebbled surface, were chosen for the floor, but plants fill large pockets on each side, next to the house, in order to maintain a garden atmosphere. A few pieces of furniture occupy the patio's centre, lightweight in order not to obstruct the view from the house, but the furniture is not essential to the patio's attractiveness.

Not pertinent to the idea, but an added asset, is the fact that the patio borders a swimming pool. A garden area, large or small, would work just as well.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Honeymoon Is Over

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I wonder what has happened to our marriage? My husband doesn't even seem to enjoy the meals I prepare for him any more, and I am told I am a fabulous cook.

We've been married 25 years, are both young and healthy, and don't look our ages.

Do all marriages go sour after 25 years? He doesn't have anything to talk to me about anymore. I have no major complaints, but that old excitement is gone. I got so annoyed one evening, that I told him that maybe he should go out and get himself a younger woman to stir him up a little, at least one of us would be happy then.

Abby, I don't expect any wild love-making, only a little conversation, hand-holding, admiration, and appreciation. What's wrong?—Greta.

DEAR GRETA: You are telling the wrong person. And any woman who tells her husband (whether in a fit of anger or in a joking way) that maybe he should get himself a younger woman should not complain if he does just that.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 12-year-old girl with a question I hope you won't think is too dumb to answer. I take piano lessons and would like more than anything in the world to be able to play piano but I just hate to practise!

You don't have to tell me that I am lazy. I know that. What I want to know is how I can learn to play the piano without practising.—Sincerely, Lazy.

DEAR LAZY: No way, Honey. No way.

DEAR ABBY: You are always putting in a good word for psychiatric help. May I add my "Amen" to this.

At age 15 my daughter was having her problems. She wasn't "popular." Her work was poor in school and she and I weren't getting along. The school recommended that she have a psychiatric evaluation and receive whatever help was indicated. It took only 4 months (both of us went so we could learn to understand each other better.)

She is now the mother of four extremely happy and well-adjusted children, but only recently her eldest evidenced signs that he could be having an emotional problem, so she requested guidance from the school principal. On his recommendation she is getting professional counselling for the boy.

Don't let up on them, Abby. Mental health is the most important thing in the world. Every day I thank the dear Lord for the help I received when I needed it. I dread to think what might have happened had I been ashamed or unaware or stingy or whatever is is that keeps so many people from seeking the help they need.—Yours very truly, Thankful in Costa Mesa.

DEAR THANKFUL: And I am "thankful" for your letter. I know of no one who at some time of his life cannot profit from professional counselling. Not everyone needs to have an in-depth analysis, but a few sessions with a wise, objective outsider sometimes works miracles.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Julie Volunteers For Tour Work

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Julie Nixon Eisenhower plans to work as a volunteer in the White House tour office this summer.

The president's 20-year-old married daughter was tapped for the job by John Davis, head of the tour office, when he learned that Julie would be living at the White House during her summer vacation and was interested in volunteer work.

She will man the telephones in the tour office and arrange the special private visits requested by members of congress and other VIPs for constituents and friends.

But Julie also will be mingling with visitors who line up for blocks for the public tour through the state rooms when the president's residence is open Tuesday through Saturday mornings each week.

Julie said: "I'll walk up and down the line, talking to tourists and answering their questions."

Before starting her new job, Julie is accompanying her mother on a four-day trip to Portland, Ore., and Los Angeles this week to whip up interest in volunteer projects to help the needy and the handicapped.

Blonde Replaces Box 99

TORONTO (CP) — Consumers with complaints can direct them to a blonde home economist now instead of a post office box.

Kay Hodgins, a Toronto mother of four, has just finished her first week as one of the federal government's five consumer consultants who will hear protests about bad products and poor service across Canada.

They will fill the place of Box 99, the federal government address for consumer complaints. It has received more than 8,000 letters since Ron Basford, consumer and corporate affairs minister, established it a year ago.

Mrs. Hodgins is the first of the consultants to start work. The others, in Halifax, Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver, will start by July 15. They will feed complaints into an Ottawa computer.

Then the consumers bureau, headed by Gordon Osbaldeston, assistant deputy minister, will try to clear up basic problems, either through legislation or by discussions with manufacturers.

Mrs. Hodgins received 10 to 12 complaints a day last week, most of them about inadequate labels on fabrics and food.

"Callers won't get lost in a bureaucratic maze," she says. "People won't get pushed along to someone else.

A LONG LOOK AT A FOREIGN LAND

A rare sight for Canadian sailors is to see a woman swabbing the decks or coiling a rope. On the Russian cargo carrier Kras Novarsk docked over the weekend at Ogden Point's pier north-B the unusual is actual usual: the 315-foot ship has six women crew members. Shown watching the Canadian docks are cook Lily K. Gavrilova and stewardess Paisa F. Paramanova, while their ship undergoes repairs. Kras Novarsk is expected to leave today for the Orient.

Mme. Pompidou Won't Be Overwhelmed

By MURIEL BOWEN

PARIS — In Mme. Pompidou, the slim, blonde and beautiful wife of the man who Sunday was elected President of France, the Elysee Palace will have a hostess in keeping with its lofty beauty.

Mme. Pompidou already runs three homes, and a rented summer chateau, without apparent effort. To the job of first lady she brings charm and intelligence.

As the daughter of a doctor, she wanted to follow in her father's footsteps, but he dissuaded her. Instead she became a lawyer. (But the Pompidou's 26-year-old son, Alain, has followed the family interest in medicine and practises as a doctor.)

A first lady who is devoted to pantsuits will be something new in Europe. Most of hers come from Courreges. Chanel does her day clothes, and Cardin and Laroche her ball gowns.

MADAME POMPIDOU

DECOR AND FOOD

Unlike Mme. de Gaulle, Mme. Pompidou is not a woman to be overwhelmed to vanishing point by her husband's personality. Nor can she be expected to leave the Elysee Palace domestic arrangements to the government-appointed staff. Both the decor and the food will have to match her standards.

Interior decoration is something at which Mme. Pompidou is especially good. In fact, she was on the point of taking it up as a second career, persuaded by friends who recognized her talent, when she met and married Georges Pompidou.

It was almost 30 years later, in 1962 when he became Gen. de Gaulle's premier, that she looked over the icy dreariness of the Hotel Matignon, the premier's official residence, turned on her heel and said to alarmed officials: "It won't do." Not only did she have the decor updated, but she had the menus for official entertaining scrapped and a completely new set of cook books put on the kitchen shelves.

MOD PICTURES

As the changes at the official residence were being completed, Mme. Pompidou took over an apartment on the fashionable Ile Saint Louis, overlooking Notre Dame, which she also completely redecorated.

The furniture is Louis XIII, but it is the almost splashy mod pictures that bring the place alive.

The Pompidous like to entertain with dinner parties and usually have about 12 guests at a time. There is a cook, but Mme. Pompidou often does the cooking herself. Gourmet bankers and diplomats praise her jugged hare and her stews.

HATES CARS

Mme. Pompidou is a woman with an enormous sweep of interests. Her taste in literature runs from Shakespeare to detective stories to de Gaulle memoirs. She likes music both traditional and mod. Indeed motor cars are her only real hate.

On week-ends the Pompidous go to the White House, a medium-size week-end retreat about 40 miles from Paris, or to the family farm at Carjac in the south of France. She exercises the horses and dogs, appearing in the horse barn in impeccably cut trousers and English woollens. He beats about the garden doing a variety of odd jobs like gathering the leaves or pruning the roses. Occasionally he shoots, which he does well.

The new French president has two novels partially written and "some ideas" for a third. An anthology of French poetry which he edited is now a standard work, and in off-duty moments he talks of one day becoming a writer.

Retarded Children Can Benefit From Physical Education Program

By STEVE HUME

Physical education programs for mentally retarded children were called for Monday by a prominent American scholar and expert on learning and sports medicine.

Speaking before delegates to the Canadian Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation convention at the University of Victoria, Dr. Lawrence Rarick of the University of California's Berkeley campus said he was pleased to see increased emphasis on physical activity for the retarded.

He was referring to Canada's first national special Olympics for mental retardates a week ago.

"While physical activity programs of a kind have for some time been in effect in many institutions and schools for the retarded, it is only within the last decade that there has been any systematic effort to study these children," said Dr. Rarick.

OPPORTUNITIES

He said recent studies indicate mentally retarded youngsters can engage in physical activities if they are given the same opportunities to learn as normal youngsters.

"It is befoming evident that the cause of retardation in motor performance in retarded children is not solely a function of mental deficiency," Dr. Rarick said.

"These children constitute a neglected segment of our school population in terms of opportunities for physical education instruction.

"Our recent national study showed that 45 per cent of the children studied had no physical education instruction; eight per cent had zero to 30 minutes per week, and only 25 per cent more than 60 minutes per week."

CORRELATION

"It is interesting to note," Dr. Rarick said, "that a direct correlation was found between instruction time and the level of motor proficiency.

"This would suggest that although the mentally deficient child might be expected to be somewhat inferior to normal children in motor development, he need not be as far behind schedule as is often the case."

He said educable retarded children appear to be about four years behind youngsters of the same age with normal intelligence when it comes to standardized motor activity tests.

"A California retarded girl of 12 years ran the 50-yard dash in six seconds flat on a hard top surface, and a six-foot-four-inch, 200-pound 17-year-old boy with an I.Q. of 70 jumped over 100 inches in the standing broad jump, climbed a 16-foot rope three times without stopping, and did 20 chin-ups."

He said while such outstanding performances are unusual among the mentally retarded it is not uncommon to see such youngsters reach the achievement level of normal children in one or more events.

If retarded and normal children are paired in physical education on the basis of mental age rather than chronological age, the performances are approximately the same, Dr. Rarick said.

INCENTIVE

"Experience has taught us that both trainable and educable retarded children can learn to perform many motor tasks reasonably well," he said.

Physical education has greatest significance for retarded youngsters because the purpose of the job is usually clear and has very obvious meaning, which provides motivation for children who cannot grasp abstracts.

"What other medium is as far reaching in its effects?" said Dr. Rarick.

"Physical experiences are real and vital, something easily understood. Such learning transcends to the child's social and emotional life, possibly setting the stage for better intellectual development.

"I am personally doubtful physical education actually alters intelligence," he said, "but if you tap the latent motor abilities of the mentally retarded youngster you can put him in a better position to learn other things.

"It is apparent that physical education and its allied professions are entering a new era, one which can mean much to the well being and happiness of retarded children and adolescents," Dr. Rarick said.

Beef Price Control Vetoed

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford Monday rejected government controls on beef prices.

He said prices had been pushed up by demand for choice cuts rising faster than supply and urged consumers to shop around for better buys in meat.

Replying to opposition demands for an investigation of recent sharp increases in the price of beef and for the establishment of price controls, the consumer affairs minister said that instead of "looking for a scapegoat" the best remedy was to cut back demand for the most expensive cuts.

He urged consumers to "resist high prices."

90 POUNDS A YEAR

The average Canadian ate 70 pounds of beef in 1960, he said, but with a rising standard of living this had gone up to an estimated 90 pounds this year.

Opening a special debate on inflation called by the opposition, James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) urged the government to pinpoint guilt for the drastic increases in beef prices.

"Somebody in this country is profiteering," he said, "and the minister has a responsibility under the Combines Investigation Act to find out just who it is."

He rejected Basford's view that the consumer should take care of high prices by refusing to pay them.

WHY HAVE DEPARTMENT

"If it is up to the consumer to buy when prices get too high," he asked, "Why do we have a department of consumer affairs?"

He urged the government to act on the recommendations of the Batten Royal Commission on Food Prices and Inflation, commissioned by the governments of the three prairie provinces.

The report proposed a federal investigation of food retailing in Canada.

NDP consumer affairs critic Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway) called for a federal government investigation of prices, beginning with beef prices, a parliamentary consumer affairs committee and a prices review board.

She said manufacturers and other businessmen should be required to go before the board and justify price increases before being permitted to make them.

LIBERALS RETAIN MARGIN IN N.B.

NEWCASTLE, N.B. (CP) — Premier Louis Robichaud's Liberal government retained Northumberland seat in a New Brunswick byelection Monday to hold its narrow edge in the legislature standings.

Frank E. Kane, a 36-year-old Chatham, N.B., insurance agent, defeated his only opponent, Conservative Charles E. Boulay, of Newcastle, in the contest, but the Liberals saw the majority they claimed in the last election cut by more than half.

The Liberal victory restored legislature standings to the 31 to 27 margin held by the government before the byelection was called.

Allowances Could Fight Poverty

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Family allowances could become a major weapon in the war on poverty, Reuben Baetz, executive director of the Canadian Welfare Council, said today at a conference on social welfare for the Atlantic provinces.

Mr. Baetz suggested a general expansion of universal allowance programs "to enhance the vital concept of community through our social services."

Direction of public money by such programs to families who did not need it could easily be avoided by taxing the allowances as income, and lowering the present $300 exemption for a dependent child for income tax purposes.

"With these proposed changes in the income tax regulations, the allowances can and should be substantially increased—two or three times their present level," he said.

HELPS SHARE WEALTH

"Indeed, in the case of single-head families, mainly female, allowances could be quadrupled. With such increases, the family allowance program could become a major weapon in our war on poverty."

It would be one effective way to help redistribute income among the various regions.

Mr. Baetz also said that once the principle of a guaranteed annual income has been accepted in Canada, the method of producing one will be worked out.

The minimum level should be large enough to overcome absolute poverty, he said. It should also provide for increases in the guaranteed income amounts to correspond to increases in total productivity of the economy.

Any guaranteed income scheme had to be accompanied by programs designed to overcome cultural and social deprivation.

"A guaranteed annual income program is no substitute for job training and retraining job development programs," Mr. Baetz added.

Shiny Keys Lure Raven To Robbery

Somewhere in a tree a thieving raven with a set of car keys is probably chuckling.

Clive Peyton, 2816 Seaview, and his dog aren't chuckling. Peyton has adopted a philosophy of "nevermore" when it comes to leaving the keys to his small sports car in the ignition.

He is convinced that a raven with the aplomb of a safecracker pulled the key ring from the ignition of his parked car.

As the pair returned to the car they saw a huge black bird perched on top of the car. The bird flew away with something shiny in it beak. At the time Peyton didn't realize what it was.

"When I reached down to start the car I realized what the raven had taken," he said. "He was gone into the woods before I realized what had happened."

"I knew ravens were attracted to metal but I didn't know they were that clever."

Justice Talks Being Considered

OTTAWA (CP) — Consideration is being given to the calling of a conference between federal justice officials and provincial attorneys-general, Justice Minister John Turner said Monday.

He said in reply to a Commons question by R. G. L. Fairweather (PC—Fundy-Royal) that the question of uniform sentencing in drug cases, as between the various provinces, might be a fit topic for the proposed conference.

Record Airlift

POHER: Short Stop Between Charles and Georges

By JONATHAN C. RANDAL
The Washington Post

PARIS — Alain Poher, who Sunday lost the French presidential election, will go down in French history as the hyphen at the Elysee Palace between Gaullism and neo-Gaullism.

DE GAULLE

POHER
. . . a short pause

POMPIDOU
. . . before new era

Principal artisan in toppling General de Gaulle in the April referendum, the portly 60-year-old president of the seante proved unable to persuade voters to carry forward that implicit anti-Gaullist mandate for change.

●

Steeped for 22 years in the polite ways of the senate, that most conservative institution in this most conservative country, Poher failed, in his advisers' eyes, because he never really tried until it was too late.

During his seven weeks as intermim president, Poher tried to wean the French away from Olympian Gaullist grandeur by portraying himself as a smaller man for the smaller problems of post-Gaullist France.

Early in the compaign Gaullist winner Georges Pompidou described Poher, the centrist candidate, as a "Quilt comforter" artificially separating the Gaullists from their main adversaries, the Communists.

●

Indeed, Poher, who looks like a cross between Alfred Hitchcock and Oliver Hardy, never persuaded voters that he was a feasible alternative to the condidtades of France's only two organized political parties.

Hesitant to outline a clear-cut course for the future, Poher also felt hobbles by his referendum campaign promise not to run for the presidency if De Gaulle lost.

His role was further complicated when he tried to steer an uneasy course between the bipartisanship he felt went with the interim presidency and the fighting image of a candidate.

This contradiction was scored by Pompidou who took exception to Poher's thanking the Gaullist cabinet for its cooperation. If Poher were so satisfied he had no right to criticize the government, argued Pompidou.

Moreover, even when Poher briefly appeared to be the man to beat, his chances reposed on discredited fourth republic electoral arithmetic whose reliance on backroom political deals was anachronistic in a country with 10 million television sets.

●

Poher and his advisers acted as if they never fully realized that a Gaullist constitutional amendment had made the election of the president a matter of direct universal suffrage rather than the choice of senators and national assembly deputies as in the past.

Before the crucial first round vote on June 1, Poher also failed to impose himself sufficiently to break Frenchmen of their odd legislative election habits.

Symptomatic of this mentality was the joke about voting for the "two Alains," meaning Trotskyite Alain Krivine on the first round and Poher Sunday.

Poher himself set the tone for such uncartesian woolgathering.

First, he summoned forth the discredited memories of the consultations involved in forming fourth republic revolving door governments by talking to almost every prominent anti-Gaullist politician.

Moreover, his uneasiness over his interim role added to the muddle. As a compromise he styled himself as the "candidate of reconciliation, a president for all Frenchmen."

●

In the first round he was not a happy warrior; indeed he was no warrior at all. While Pompidou flew around France by jet and helicopter in best "making of the president" style, Poher went no further than shuttling between the Elysee presidential palace on the right bank and the senate on the left bank.

BELGIAN SOCIALIST NAMED HEAD OF WEU

PARIS (Reuters)—Belgian Socialist Senator Georges Housiaux today was elected president of the assembly of the Western European Union, a body grouping Britain and the six members of the Common Market.

He was elected in the first round of a secret ballot by 52 votes against Duncan Sandys, British Conservative party member of Parliament, who polled 32.

There were three spoiled votes in an assembly totalling 87.

Sino-Soviet War Threat Seen Growing

By STANLEY KARNOW

WASHINGTON (WP) — For the first time since the Sino-Soviet dispute started to escalate a decade ago, the experts are seriously beginning to contemplate the possibility of a large-scale war between the Chinese and Russians.

That a major clash between Red China and the Soviet Union may be in the offing is reflected in the rhetoric currently coming out of Peking and Moscow—as well as in the actual deployment of forces being made by the two Communist giants along their vast border area.

Last week, for example, Peking accused the Russians of intruding into northwestern Sinkiang province, China's nuclear test site and one of its most vulnerable regions.

It was here, back in 1962, that Soviet agents incited thousands of Uighurs, Kazakhs and other Moslem minorities to revolt against the province's Chinese aurthorities. Judging from Peking charges, the Russians are again accelerating their efforts to encourage Sinkiang separatism.

Within recent weeks, moreover, both the Russians and Chinese have reportedly been building up their military strength in the sectors adjoining their common frontier.

Among other moves, the Russians are preparing to hold army manoeuvres in parts of their border zone and naval exercises near the northeast coast of China.

The fact that Moscow has just banned foreigners from the trans-Siberian railway plainly indicates that Soviet troop activity in the Far East is being stepped up.

Matching this Soviet muscle-flexing, the Chinese have transferred numbers of jet fighter aircraft to fields close to the frontier.

They are also said to be intensifying their attempts to complete medium-range missiles designed to counter the Soviet missiles aimed at China from Mongolian and Siberian bases.

Meanwhile, the invective flying between Peking and Moscow, though couched in typically elliptical language, has lately taken on a tone of belligerence that denotes more than mere propaganda.

After agreeing to refrain from berating Peking at the world Communist conference being held in Moscow, for instance, Soviet party boss Leonid Brezhnev could not resist the impulse to allege that the Chinese are planning to launch "both a conventional and a great nuclear war" against the Russians.

The bitter Brezhnev accusation, characteristic of the mirror idiom employed by the Communists, suggests that the Soviet leaders are themselves considering a pre-emptive attack against China.

Similarly, Chinese words and actions seem to imply that Peking is striving to provoke the Russians, partly to nurture the credibility of a Soviet threat and partly to test Moscow's reactions.

Quoting Mao Tse-tung, a Peking radio broadcast last week stated: "When facing a wild beast, one must not show the slightest timidity."

●

Thus neither the Chinese nor the Russians are behaving towards one another with rational restraint, and hence their present course could well lead to an open conflict through miscalculation rather than design. Should a conflict erupt, both Peking and Moscow can only emerge as losers.

England Attracting Visitors From Here

"It's the biggest yet," a local travel agent said. "There are more excursion flights and more charter flights and, believe me, they're keeping us hopping.

"One of the headaches is getting people to understand they must have a certificate of Canadian citizenship to get a passport, regardless of how long they've lived in Canada.

Until this year, the agent said, the Canadian government "winked an eye" at British subjects who didn't have certificates.

"Those days are gone. British subjects are no longer privileged; they must have a certificate the same as immigrants from all countries."

And, if your passport has expired, you can't get it renewed, but must apply for a new one.

A new passport costs $10 and the citizenship certificate $2.50.

WONDERFUL LIMITS

What is Britain's main attraction, apart from looking up friends and relatives?

"Antiquity," said the travel agent, "the wonderful links with the past; towns and villages going back centuries, quaint old-world buildings and ancient ceremonials and customs."

But what of Swinging London, with its micro-skirts, its hippies, its discotheques and high-rises?

There is considerable difference of opinion.

"I went there for five weeks and stayed three," said a 57-year-old Victoria accountant. "Couldn't stand all the noise and the crowds, and those awful long-haired creatures.

"It just isn't the London I knew."

ACTOR LIKES IT

"I wouldn't live anywhere else in the world," said actor-journalist Jon Farrell, who was visiting here for a day. He has swapped his London apartment for six months with Norman Hacking, shipping editor of the Vancouver Province.

Farrell was born and raised in Ontario and worked in Vancouver until 1940, when he went overseas with the Canadian Army.

After the war he went on the London stage, playing mostly American roles. He's still at it, but when things are slack in the theatre, he goes back to journalism.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Maunsell of Victoria spent two years in London and say they wouldn't have left it but for the cold winters and the badly-heated homes.

"If we could have afforded a modern apartment, we would have stayed." Mrs. Maunsell said. "But we had to settle for rooms in a suburban home—and we simply froze."

Mrs. Ethel Rolston, who visited Britain last year after 33 years in Canada, said she didn't care for modern London but loved the country towns and villages.

"There's nothing like them in Canada," she said. "One town I stayed in was made into a borough in 1067—the year after William the Conqueror invaded England. It's really fascinating."

Before the Magistrate

Gloria Turko, 33, of 426 Belmont Road, Monday in central court was given probation, fined a total of $385 and sentenced to one day in jail on 12 charges of fraud.

She had pleaded guilty to buying $250 worth of clothing from Woodwards by using someone else's credit card.

Magistrate Ostler referred to it as a wholesale program of obtaining good by deceit.

She was ordered to put up a $500 one-year good behavior bond.

Mark G. Murray, 20, 586 Kenneth, was discharged after a preliminary hearing for possession of housebreaking tools.

He was arrested May 21 and had elected trial by county court judge.

Magistrate Ostler said there was insufficient evidence to commit him for trial

Hudson West, 26, of 718 Kings, pleaded guilty in central court Monday to stealing a wallet with 30 cents in it.

He was remanded to today for sentence.

Court was told he was drinking in a city beer parlor Saturday when a man sat with him and put his wallet on the table. West grabbed it and ran.

He told police he believed there was a credit card inside, and he wanted to buy food for his family.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said West had convictions dating back to 1965 for breaking and entering, unlawfully being in a dwelling house, and theft.

Room For All In Kindergarten Seen For 1970

By 1970 Greater Victoria school districit kindergartens should be able to accommodate all children of kindergarten age, assistant superintendent A. J. Longmore told a monthly school board meeting Monday.

He said the 1,800 children now attending public school kindergartens represented 75 per cent of the total pre-grade one population.

Longmore also announced six new kindergartens would be ready by September in the following elementary schools: Doncaster, Hampton, Hillcrest, Rockheights, Sir James Douglas and a second kindergarten in Quadra.

MOUNTAIN OF SAND discovered by Wendy and Wesley Rogers, 1881 San Juan, and Roddy and Marie McNeill, 1892 San Juan, is part of preparations being made at the Kinsmen's Gorge Road Park for annual swim and water safety classes, due to be held July 2 to 17 and July 17 to 31. The Red Cross classes are sponsored by the Kinette Club of Victoria. Registrations will be taken June 22, from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m., for children between 8 and 12 years of age. Pupils must be accompanied by an adult.

Rising Beef Prices Create Problems for Restaurants

By JOHN DRISCOLL

The instability of the soaring beef market has made restaurant and hotel dining room menus obsolete by the time they get back from the printer.

A new menu which went into effect June 1 at the Century Inn, for example, is already out of date, according to Century manager Bruce Auchinvole.

NOT HEALTHY

Lloyd Larsen at the Crest Motel and Restaurant said he had $300 worth of menus printed in May and "the menus are back at the printers this week."

"You feel almost guilty asking people to pay so much for some plates," said Larsen.

"If you don't raise the prices though you'd be working strictly for the enjoyment of it."

"We were in the position of adjusting our prices upward to meet a three or four-per-cent increase in food costs generally," Auchinvole explained.

"What we didn't realize was that beef prices would get so far out of line."

"This is not a healthy kind of price increase," said Larsen. "And we've been as much as told to expect another rise in beef costs soon."

Auchinvole said one particular cut of steak on the new menu was based on the Century paying $3.21 for an order.

"We're now paying $4.10 for that particular order," he said.

NOT DROPPING BEEF

"There's not much we can do except live with it and hope beef prices come down."

The Century and the Crest do not plan to drop the more expensive cuts of beef from their menu as some Victoria restaurants have done.

"It's very disturbing to us to have to ask the prices we are asking," said Larsen. "We are encouraging people to try other less expensive orders."

Economists have stated that the full effects of the increase in beef prices has not yet reached the consumer. They predict the high price of beef will continue at least until the fall.

LIFEGUARDS GO ON DAILY DUTY

Lifeguards will be posted daily at Elk and Beaver Lakes in Saanich until the end of the month, when regular daily lifeguard protection was to start, it was announced Monday.

Ald. William Noel, chairman of the municipal parks and recreation committee, said the decision stems from the increased usage of the swimming areas in the current hot weather.

Lifeguards will be at their stations from midday until 8 p.m. Previously they were there only on weekends.

Creek Cleanup Starts Thursday

The great Colquitz Creek cleanup will start this Thursday night.

With some supervision from Saanich officials, a group headed by Joe Pilot will work in the area from Interurban Road to the Trans-Canada Highway.

The work will continue Friday evening, all day Saturday, and on Sunday there will be what was described as a "general gathering."

Pilot has described the work as a community project and he has been touch with various groups for volunteers. He is a member of a group called House of Universal Brotherhood, a non-religious and non-political organization which involves itself in projects "beneficial to the community."

Participants will have to provide their own hand tools and Saanich has said it will accept no responsibility for accidents.

"In a project such as this, it is difficult to guarantee what will happen in terms of good work, how much will be done," Acting Mayor Leslie Passmore told Saanich council Monday night.

"It is strictly volunteer work. Joe mentions thousands of helpers. I think he is over zealous."

Ald. William Noel told council that the St. John Ambulance will be in attendance.

Uncluttered Look Back in Favor Among Gardeners

By SUSAN MAYSE

Victoria gardeners are choosing simple and uncluttered arrangements this year, according to Robert and Jean Dodd.

"Last year everyone was putting in Japanese gardens, with lanterns or pagodas. But this year they seem to be returning to very simple settings — and I think people are becoming more patio-conscious," said Mrs. Dodd.

The Dodds are in a position to know exactly what goes on in the minds of Victoria gardeners — they operate a small shop on Quadra Street which supplies almost every imaginable type of garden ornament in concrete and earthenware.

The birdbath, too, has made a return to favor this year, they said, along with concrete planters.

FROGS AND TOADS

But probably the biggest all-time favorite, Dodd said, is the store's selection of frogs, toads and dwarfs.

These and other animals, — squirrels, deer, dogs — are popular year after year, he said, and his Studio of Decorative Arts stocks four or five shapes and sizes of each.

Classical-looking concrete benches can be bought with or without the seat, leaving room for imagination, and the tops and bottoms of several of his birdbaths and fountain pieces are interchangeable.

The use of garden supplies from the shop doesn't seem to be limited to gardens though, Dodd said.

"You'll find ornaments being used as doorstops or just for decoration in houses all over town," he said.

CLASSICAL WORKS

All but the imported pieces Dodd casts himself in the yard behind the store. Some of the molds he made himself from statues, others are produced for the use of small shops like his by firms in the United States.

Several classical works are reproduced by his casts, among them a group, the Three Graces, and a bust of Diana.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Today's hand decided a match in the World Bridge Olympiad of 1960. The bidding was the same at both tables. At the first table the deuce of diamonds was opened.

This solved one of South's problems immediately—his possible diamond loser. All he needed to do was to avoid the loss of more than one spade trick. He wasn't worried about 3-2 breaks and could do nothing about four to the king-10 in the West hand or five spades in either hand. Therefore his only concern was with four spades in the East hand and just one in the West hand.

If that was the situation, the best play would be to enter dummy with a heart or club, lead a spade and finesse the jack. A repeated finesse in the trumps would handle the case of a singleton three, five or seven in the West hand. Therefore South went to dummy with a heart and finessed the jack of spades. West made his singleton king. Later on East's 10 of trumps set the contract. At the other table the four of clubs was led. South studied the hand carefully and decided that he had so many problems in other suits that he could not afford to take the best play in trumps.

After winning the club lead in his hand, he played his ace of spades. When the king dropped, he could afford to enter dummy with the jack of clubs, finesse against East's trump 10 and eventually discard his diamond queen on one of dummy's hearts.

Both declarers gave the hand the best percentage play based on the opening lead but the luck of duplicate produced a tremendous swing against the man who had received a diamond opening lead.

De Gaulle Presses For Status Quo Policy

PARIS (AP) — President-elect Georges Pompidou is reported under pressure from his old boss to select a faithful Gaullist as his foreign minister—one who would keep intact France's basic foreign policy of the last 11 years.

Reports circulating in Western embassies and the French press today indicated former president Charles de Gaulle wants Pompidou to reappoint Foreign Minister Michel Debre or name the current premier, Maurice Couve de Murville. Couve de Murville served as de Gaulle's foreign minister before he succeeded Pompidou as premier last year.

If Debre and Couve de Murville are passed over, another possible candidate is Valery Giscard d'Estaing, a Liberal who once served in de Gaulle's cabinet. Even if he doesn't become foreign minister, D'Estaing is expected to be in Pompidou's new cabinet.

The morning newspaper L'Aurore, which opposed the election of Pompidou, reported: "De Gaulle reportedly made known his very firm desire to see his foreign minister (Debre) kept at his post, guaranteeing in his eyes the continuity of his foreign policy."

KEPT BRITAIN OUT

Debre was de Gaulle's main spokesman in enunciating policies that kept Britain out of the Common Market, banned arms shipments to Israel and kept France out of playing a major role in uniting Europe.

The cabinet will be named Friday after Pompidou takes office.There is widespread agreement that Gaullist National Assembly President Jacques Chaban-Delmas will be named premier.

Antoine Pinay, 78, a finance minister under de Gaulle regarded by many Frenchmen as the symbol of sound monetary policy, is considered the most likely candidate for finance minister.

Pompidou is understood to be following a list of priorities that he announced for himself before his runoff victory Sunday over Poher. This means defending the franc and holding down inflation before foreign policy considerations.

Pompidou is said to be aiming much of his planning toward September—the start of university classes, meetings of the International Monetary Fund and wage negotiations between the government's nationalized industry and labor unions.

Watch Officer Won't Testify

SUBIC BAY (Reuters) — The 24-year-old officer of the watch of the U.S. destroyer Frank E. Evans when it collided with the Australian carrier Melbourne refused to testify today before a board of inquiry into the disaster.

The refusal of Lieut. Ronald Ramsey to give evidence was based on a decision by the board that he could not examine the testimony of earlier witnesses, that he could not recall witnesses and that he could not cross-examine witnesses.

The inquiry into the Melbourne-Evans collision June 3, which killed 74 U.S. seamen in the South China Sea, is being conducted under the U.S. Judge Advocate General's Manual. This states in part that a witness has the right "to terminate the interview at any time and for any reason."

Ramsey, who was warned at the opening of the hearing that he was suspected of "negligently hazarding" an American warship, today sat emotionless beside his legal counsel, Lieut. Frederick Tilton, 27.

Tilton obtained permission to read a statement giving the reasons for Ramsey's decision not to testify.

Ramsey was first called to testify Saturday but he successfully obtained adjournment of his hearing until today.

ALSO WARNED

Another officer, Lieut. James Hopson, the junior officer of the watch at the time of the disaster, also was warned before he testified Saturday that he was suspected of negligent hazarding a warship.

Earlier today the navigating officer of the Melbourne, Cmdr. Anthony R. Horton, told the inquiry board he saw the Evans move to a plane rescue position on the night of June 2 a few hours before it repeated the manoeuvre and was sliced in halves by the Melbourne.

Horton said the Evans moved from its position on escort screen to plane guard for flying operation several times up to midnight of June 2.

"I only saw the Evans moving from the screen to astern on one occasion," he said.

"My only observation at the time was that I commented to somebody that the Evans was coming in astern in a very safe and runabout manner," he added.

BLASTS ON SIREN

Horton said when the manoeuvre was repeated just before the collision, Capt. John Stevenson, skipper of the Melbourne, ordered two short blasts on the siren to indicate the carrier was moving to port.

The effect of the Melbourne's swing to port was that the Evans moved from about 10 degrees on the carrier's port bow to about 10 degrees on the starboard bow.

He estimated it took 10 to 12 seconds between Melbourne's signal it was going to port and Evans' signal it was turning to starboard.

In reply to a question, he said there would not have been a collision if the Evans had not altered course to starboard.

Asked if there would have been a collision if the Melbourne had remained steady on course and the Evans had moved to starboard, he said: "I don't know, inasmuch as Melbourne was swinging at the time I got on the bridge."

Hurry Home Tops Pigeons

Speedy "Hurry Home" of the Capital City Racing Pigeon hurried home to win first place for owners Jack and Dick Lowrence in the second Kamloops race of the season on Sunday.

Hotel Workers Get Pay Hike

The new two-year contract involves Local 835 of the Beverage Dispensers' Union, the Century Inn, Douglas, Royal Olympic and Churchill Hotels, and covers all employees with the exception of bartenders and waiters in the licensed premises of each hotel. They are covered by a separate agreement.

For the first time employees will also have paid statutory holidays; three-week vacations after five years of service and four weeks after eight years.

Stink Raised Over Garbage

The present contract service comes to an end this January, when Saanich will start its own garbage service with some new vehicles.

Ease Liquor Laws, Report Suggests

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The Northwest Territories Liquor Commission report recommends lowering of the legal drinking age to 19 and that persons under that age be allowed to drink beer or wine in a licensed dining lounge with a meal if accompanied by their parents or recognized guardian.

The report is the work of a four-man commission headed by Jacques Choquette of Ottawa, executive director of the Canadian Association of Provincial Liquor Commissioners.

HOME GARDEN

Plant World on Display

By HILDA BEASTALL

The two-day summer flower show of Victoria Horticultural Society has been geared this year to enable more exhibitors to exhibit and more visitors to visit. How is this done? By staging the show on Saturday and Sunday.

Hilda

This arrangement enables working exhibitors to prepare and table their entries on Friday night and Saturday morning. It opens the show to the public for visiting on Saturday from 2 to 10 p.m. and all day Sunday.

To see this building transferred inside to what amounts to a huge conservatory or garden is a wonderful sight. The sense of smell helps too, for perfume of roses, sweet peas and garden pinks will fill the air.

A ramp entry from the parking lots enables wheelchairs to make easy entrance and exit. Information on this is available from the ticket desk inside the front entrance. Baby buggies can also be pushed around with no disturbance of sleepers.

All the beauty of the cultivated plant world from gardens in Victoria and vicinity will be gathered for viewing.

Commercial displays of interest to gardeners and visitors will also be staged, so, if you like flowers and people, see this show.

He's Full-Time Pied Piper With His MAD-100 Group

TORONTO (CP) — Murray Starr is an ex-boxer, ex-wrestler, ex-bouncer, ex-taxi driver, sometime hotel manager and full-time pied piper to Toronto's youth.

The bond between Murray and the kids is music, art and drama, and that's what the letters stand for in his organization's name—MAD-100. It was started in Centennial Year, and that explains the 100.

MAD-100, with no dues, no list of members and no obligations, attracts about 150 youngsters from all over Metropolitan Toronto, from rich and poor homes alike. They come and go as they please.

The organization holds regular meetings three times a week, but MAD groups also meet in homes. The groups often develop entertainment projects and visit schools and homes for the retarded and mentally ill.

Trying to explain his relationship with the kids, Mr. Starr says: "Sometimes we talk; we shout; we swear. Sometimes we walk away in anger," but the kids come back."

It all started when his son Lerrick said he wanted to do some acting, and his father agreed to coach him.

"The only dramatic background I had was from my years as a professional wrestler. I learned then that an actor is someone who is a liar—his job is to stand up there and convince you he is something else than what he is."

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Amateurs Captured Strongest Fortress

By BOB BOWMAN

On April 5 the story was told about the force of amateur soldiers from the New England states that set out to capture the fortress of Louisburg, Cape Breton, which was supposed to be the strongest in the world.

Bowman

The amateurs undoubtedly would have been defeated if they had not been joined by a Royal Navy squadron from the West Indies under Commodore Warren.

The attack on Louisburg began on April 30 when the troops had to wade through icy water to get to shore, and drag their guns through boulders and marshland to sheltered positions in the woods.

There was a number of hard-fought engagements on land and sea, and the attack on Louisburg continued for six weeks.

On the night of June 16, 1745, the army, under William Pepperell, and the Royal Navy units made a determined combined assault on the fortress and it surrendered the following day.

Then Commodore Warren played a profitable trick, which would not be possible today. He kept the French flag flying over Louisburg, and the outside world did not know what had happened as there were no communications.

For several weeks French ships sailed into Louisburg harbor and were captured easily. The value of their cargoes ran into the equivalent of millions of dollars.

Under British naval regulations half of this went to the Crown but the other half was divided among the officers and men of the fleet.

The poor soldiers were not entitled to any of the bounty and would have rebelled if they had not been offered land in Cape Breton and given raises in pay. Many of them died during the occupation of Louisburg.

Then Britain really disgusted the New England states by trading Louisburg back to France for Madras, India! The great achievement had gone for nothing.

Other events on June 17:

1673 — Marquette and Joliet discovered Mississippi River.

Take a Pill And Beat Buzz Bombers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Having a problem with mosquitoes?

Take a pill.

The mosquito fighter, surely the last word in pills, will not be ready for use for some time, but the British Columbia Research Council, located at the University of British Columbia campus here, is working on the project.

Dr. Robert H. Wright, in charge of the council laboratory, said development of the anti-mosquito pill will take more than two years—considered a short time for this type of research.

Rearing mosquitoes and experimenting with odors, the researchers hope to find one which will repel them, and to incorporate it in a pill.

The pill ingredients would be carried throughout the body, emerging through the skin in perspiration.

Dr. Wright said it is hoped the odiferous effects of the pill would last one or two days, considerably longer than the present mosquito lotions.

But there's no word yet on the possible effect the odor might have on other people.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Beverly Littlewood, age 10, of Chappawa, Ontario, for her question:

If you examine the burned-out bulb you may or may not notice a fine sooty film on the inside of the glass. This could have warned you that the bright-eyed little bulb was just about ready to give up the ghost.

Electricity is a fierce force of nature and to tame it we must keep it safely imprisoned within shielded copper wires. Experts in the know are sure to approach it with care. So let's follow their procedure and study our light bulb when it is not screwed into a socket. Besides, it's easier that way to peek inside. The best specimen for this job is made of clear glass.

Notice the wire inside the little glass bubble. There are two rather sturdy prongs coming up from the base. The tops of the prongs are joined with a fine-fine filament of wire. That is, if your bulb is in working good health. After it burns out, the fine filament is in horrible condition and maybe you can see that is is broken.

The metal base of the bulb is made to screw into an electric socket. This socket is a cunning outlet that can tap the electric current in the wires. The current is a stream of zillions of moving electrons, those minuscule particles that usually orbit around inside atoms. The electric current must travel in a circuit from a generator and back again. We make it travel through the house in a circuit of carefully shielded double copper wires. Each socket is a depot where we can latch onto some of the power in the electric circuit.

When the bulb is screwed into a socket, its metal base contacts the current. Its built-in wires lead the power up through the wires sealed inside the glass bubble. When we turn on the switch, streams of teeming electrons zoom through the rods in the bulb and across the fine filament at the top. In the upright rods, the swarming electrons had a fair amount of room for their antics. But this changes when they crowd into that fine filament. Suddenly their huge wide highway becomes a single traffic lane.

Strong Metal

They are all crowded together, travelling at breakneck speeds. You can guess what happens, electrons collide millions of times a second. All these traffic accidents cause heat, enough heat to make the filament glow with light — electric light. However, the fine filament can take only so much of this glowing heat. After so many hours of duty its mistreated atoms begin to separate and the filament fails. If this fine wire, or any other part of the electric circuit is broken, the electric current is disconnected. So when the filament burns out, the electric light must give up the ghost.

What we need, of course, is a super-tough metal for making that thin filament in our light bulbs. The first ones were made of carbon but this substance could not withstand those energetic electrons for very long. Several stronger materials were used later. Nowadays most light bulbs have filaments of tungsten or molybdenum. But even these tough metals give up after so many hours of lighting duty. Some modern bulbs are supposed to last for years, but they give somehwat less light. So far, nobody has invented a super-bright light bulb with a filament that lasts and lasts.

* * *

Andy sends a World Book Atlas to Mike Stukel, age 12, of Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, for his question:

"Lode" was an old English word for journey, and a lodestone is a mineral that can help a traveller to pursue his journey in the right direction. You've already guessed what it is. The lodestone discovered in ancient days was a magnet. When a sliver of magnetized iron is suspended from a string, it always swings around until one end points to the earth's north magnetic pole. The other end, of course, points to the opposite south magnetic pole. This gadget is the basis for the magnetic compass. When you have verified which way is north, you can figure out the other directions. Facing the north, east is to your right, west is to your left and south is behind you.

The words "lodestone" and "lodestar" are not commonly used in modern English, which seems a pity. A lodestar, naturally, performs somewhat the same function as a lodestone but from a celestial point of view. North of the equator, Polaris is the dependable lodestar that points the northward journey. Navigators in the know also use other lodestars to verify various directions north and south of the equator.

M-B SAWMILLS PLAN PRODUCTION CUTBACKS

MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., a giant in the British Columbia forest industry, Tuesday announced production cutbacks at five sawmill operations on the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island.

A spokesman for the company said the third or "graveyard" shift will be stopped during July and August. The stoppage was due to the "sharply reduced" demand for lumber and a "continuing shortage of logs."

Affected are the Canadian White Pine Sawmill Division in Vancouver, New Westminster Sawmill Division, Chemainus Sawmill Division and Somass and Alberni Pacific Sawmill division in Port Alberni.

'We Did Everything But Land on Moon'

By THOMAS STAFFORD

We woshed out of the blackness behind the moon and suddenly could see it there. We felt great.

We were having a ball. While we were still bubbling over—and trying to get our heads out of the windows long enough to get some work done—John came out with a phrase which broke us all up: "Well, now that we're here, what do we do?"

For a complex mission, our overall mission objective was pretty simple: do everything the moon-landing crew will do except land.

We worked out all the details, the techniques, the check list from liftoff all the way to the moon and back. Everything worked as planned. I wouldn't make one change from the flight plan we flew. The only new things for the Apollo 11 crew will be powered descent to the moon's surface, the surface work, and the ascent into lunar orbit again.

Our flight had some cliffhangers along the way, of course. One of the first was that snowstorm we had of fiberglass insulation which had burst out of its covering when we pressurized the lunar module, Snoopy.

I didn't know how bad it was until after Gene went into Snoopy to activate the systems. I left my couch to help out and poked my head into Snoopy and looked at Gene. He had bits of white insulation stuck to his eyebrows, his eyes, his nostrils, his hair, his ears, and I just burst out laughing.

I remember when I was a boy in Weatherford, Okla., I used to go down to poultry house there once in a while and watch. On plucking day there's be chicken feathers all over the place, flying around in the air and people coughing and wheezing. I'd forgotten all about it until I saw old Gene in there.

Color Television

I floated back into command module, Charlie Brown, and got a suit hose, which provides air circulation to our suits. It has an inlet and outlet with a screen over the inlet as a filter, and I used it like a vacuum cleaner.

The fiberglass particles would form like big snowballs on the end of the hose and I'd pick them off and stow them in bags. It would have been funny on television.

I fought hard and long to get that high-resolution color television camera on board. We had black and white on board before, but it didn't produce the total grandeur in spectrum that we had all seen in space.

I knew what was up there—the wonderful view—I really wanted to show it and share it because it belongs to all people, and I have been happy to learn that they appreciate it.

We had a lot of important things to do in lunar orbit, but one of the crucial jobs was to evaluate the gravitational potential. The moon's pull does some funny things, and we want to know a lot more about it. For one thing, it will distort a spacecraft's natural orbit.

Adnormal Pull

Charlie Brown went into a perfect circular orbit 60 miles above the moon, and 61 hours later that circle had deteriorated to an apogee of 70 miles and a perigee of 50 miles without firing any of the engines at all.

Then there is the effect of "mascons" or mass concentrations—areas of extreme density which exercise a stronger gravitational pull than normal. Their effect actually is noticeable even here on earth. The igneous mass of the island of Puerto Rico exercises a stronger pull than the waters surrounding it, and some of our satellites get their orbits perturbed slightly when they pass over the island.

The moon is a much smaller mass than the earth, so the effect of the concentrations there is more noticeable.

On both of our very low passes across the moon's surface, when we were down to about 47,000 feet (less than nine miles), we were suddenly pulled downward, and our speed accelerated by about 20 feet per second. Once we had passed over these dense areas we went back up again.

We were going so fast—about 4,000 miles an hour—that the centrifugal force of our flight compensated for the gravitational pull and we were actually unaware of the physical distortion of our orbit. But it showed up clearly in the flight data recorded on earth by telemetry. It didn't bother us, but if you were trying to land a lunar module, and one of those mascon areas grabbed you, you could rip your britches.

It's difficult to convey just what a light-weight structure the lunar module really is. Because it's built for lunar work only it's just a thin shell, and every little rocket thrust or engine action shakes it up and makes a terrific noise.

Ever since I've been in the space program, seven years now, people have been trying to find a way to shave. I'd hate to think how much time has

House-Senate Committee Set

OTTAWA (CP) — The government gave formal notice today that it proposes appointment of a joint Senate-Commons committee on price stability, incomes and employment.

BASFORD
. . . pressure builds up

The notice on the Commons order paper, for consideration Wednesday, was in the name of Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford. Before entering the cabinet, Mr. Basford was joint chairman of a similar committee which reported in 1967 after hearings across the country on consumer prices.

Mr. Basford mentioned the inquiry proposal plan in the Commons Monday as the Liberal government fought off a Conservative attack on its consumer affairs policies.

Basford had indicated he did not favor government-imposed price control of beef prices. He blamed recent highly publicized beef price increases on public demand for high-priced cuts. (See page 22.)

The motion calls for the committee to consider reports from the recently-established prices and incomes commission headed by Dr. John H. Young of the University of British Columbia. It is to have power to sit when Parliament is adjourned.

The Senate is to be asked to join with the Commons on the project. Senator David Croll (L—Ontario) was joint chairman with Mr. Basford of the last prices committee.

HOLD EXTRA SITTINGS

This morning, the Commons embarked on the first of a set of extra sittings aimed at clearing the legislative decks for a scheduled summer adjournment June 27.

In quick time, it approved amendments to the National Housing Act before turning to other government business. The NHA amendments now go to the Senate.

Three extra hours were provided today, all on government legislation, by sitting 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. A similar move is due Thursday. Another extra three hours are planned Wednesday and one on Friday.

The normal sitting today was scheduled for 2 p.m. with the usual opening business and oral question period followed by an NDP challenge to the government's Western farm program.

On Monday, Mr. Basford countered opposition criticism of the government consumer affairs policies with a review of his department's activities, a promise to amend the Combines Investigation Act as soon as a study is received from the Economic Council of Canada and an appeal to housewives to vary their diet.

Oak Bay Secrecy Continues

By PAT DUFOUR

Oak Bay council "does a disservice to every Oak Bay taxpayer" every time it holds a secret meeting, said the president of the municipality's ratepayers' association today.

Con Watling made the statement to the Times after reporters were refused admittance to a Monday night meeting about apparent discrepancies in 1969 assessments.

The council plans another secret session tonight and Allan Horne says it should not be allowed to happen.

Reporters and public are barred when council goes into what is called committee of the whole.

"Under the Municipal Act," said Horne, "meetings can only be held in camera when it is in the best public interest.

"A committee as a whole is not a secret meeting. It only changes the parliamentary rules to allow for free discussion, requiring no seconders.

"I am against this business of secret meetings. When I object I'm told that this is the way Oak Bay has operated for the past 20 years. Very cosy."

OLD POLICY

Mayor Fred Hawes said today it "had been the policy long before my time that committees as a whole were held in private."

He said that while Victoria and Saanich councils opened their committee meetings to the press he understood that "Esquimalt did much of its work in camera."

He agreed to take the matter of secret meetings up with council, adding:

TRUDEAU CRITICIZES CANCELLATION

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, a target last year during the June 24 St. Jean Baptiste Day riot in Montreal, criticized Monday events surrounding the cancellation of the 1969 event at Sherbrooke, Que.

It is wrong that "a small group which chooses to throw bombs" has the power to change the minds of elected officials, he said after learning of the decision to cancel.

Accountant Testifies On Deals

VANCOUVER (CP) — An accountant testified Monday that money from an adviser's trust account for a mutual fund was paid into the personal trust account of A. G. Duncan Crux, Vancouver lawyer-financier.

Alan Kemp-Gee was testifying at a hearing collecting evidence to be sent to officials in the Bahamas to support British Columbia's attempt to have Crux extradited so he can go on trial here.

Crux, former president of Commonwealth Trust Co., which headed the group, faces 24 charges of fraud and theft involving about $1,000,000. He is free on $75,000 bail in Nassau.

Mr. Kemp-Gee, appearing before Magistrate Harvey Sedgewick, spent Monday testifying about dealings of the mutual funds, Diversified A and B, managed by Diversified Income Securities Ltd. a Commonwealth Group company.

Mr. Kemp-Gee said that from January, 1962, to July, 1965, trustees of one of the funds paid out $13,750 listed for advisory board fees—of which $1,750 went into the Crux general account.

The balance of $12,000 went into an advisory board trust account. Mr. Kemp-Gee said payments from the trust account included $1,350 to Crux's personal trust account.

He said $1,150 was paid to the late Prof. Leslie Wong of University of B.C., an adviser; $250 went to buy shares for investment dealer Vincent Williams, another adviser, and $72.50 was credited to the late John V. Fisher, another adviser and onetime deputy finance minister of B.C.

Mr. Kemp-Gee said he couldn't trace one $2,000 sum.

Satan or Santa? Pompidou Enigma

By DONALD H. LOUCHHEIM
The Washington Post

PARIS—During a heated national assembly debate last year, one of Georges Pompidou's opponents told the then-premier that "with your sardonic smile and your thick eyebrows, you remind me of the devil".

In his successful campaign for the French presidency, Pompidou trimmed his bushy black eyebrows. And, as one disgruntled opponent complained, he came across not as Satan but as Santa Claus.

Somewhere between these two flippant caricatures is the real Georges Pompidou, 57, former professor, former banker, former premier, newly-elected second president of France's Fifth Republic.

To his admirers, Pompideau is tough, firm, pragmatic, self-confident and thoughtful. To his detractors, these same characteristics have a pejorative connotation — ruthless, a uthoritarian, opportunistic, arrogant and calculating.

Remains Enigma

Perhaps surprisingly, few Frenchmen would be able to say with any conviction which portrait of their new chief executive is more fitting.

For despite his more than six-year term as de Gaulle's prime minister, despite his accepted status during the past year as the aging general's heir-apparent, despite his energetic campaign speeches, Georges Pompidou still remains an enigma to most of his countrymen. Nor is there any certainty about what policies he will pursue as president.

His long service as de Gaulle's deputy—Pompidou's term as premier set a 20th century record in France—offers few clues. Although he campaigned as a guarantor of the general's legacy, he is viewed with suspicion by many of de Gaulle's most ardent supporters.

Major Mystery

Indeed, Pompidou's relationship with de Gaulle is one of the major mysteries of the new president's meteoric political career. De Gaulle singlehandedly created Pompidou as a political figure, even seemed to make him his "Dauphin," then apparently tried to destroy him at the very height of his power and prestige.

Almost any informed Frenchman could tick off such a list of Pompideau's tastes and hobbies. But is he favorable to Britain's entry in the Common Market? Will he lift or modify the French arms embargo in Israel? Will he make France a participant in new international monetary arrangements? Will he permit the free play of democracy in France? Will he cut back the French nuclear force? Will he

SOAMES

Britain Planning New ECM Bid

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Britain is summoning home envoys from key continental countries to appraise policy and tactics for a new bid to win entry into the European Common Market, informants said today.

The move came after Prime Minister Wilson signalled President-elect Georges Pompidou of France that Britain is ready to begin the process of British-French reconciliation. London hopes Charles de Gaulle's successor will remove the French veto on British entry.

Political sources said Wilson is likely to follow up his offer with a suggestion to meet Pompidou this summer, but only if Christopher Soames, Britain's ambassador to France, judges it will prove productive.

The envoys being summoned home are said to include those from the six Common Market capitals and possibly from some of the key member countries in the European Free Trade Association.

Berger Attacks New Agency As Front for Patronage

A new provincial agency to assist the unemployed is really camouflague for a Social Credit manoeuvre to "dole out patronage with $50,000 of the taxpayers' money," opposition leader Tom Berger charged Monday.

Berger was attacking the mysterious Provincial Alliance of Businessmen, and the minister without portfolio who set up the agency, P. A. Gaglardi.

The Alliance has a $50,000 operating budget, at least three employees and offices in Victoria, Vancouver and Kamloops.

Its aim, according to Gaglardi, is to attack unemployment in British Columbia with industrial leaders and the government co-operating to find jobs for the hard-core unemployed.

UNNAMED MEMBERS

"The government should come clean and tell us who the PAB are," said Berger.

Berger said two of three managers of alliance offices already set up are well known Socreds. He was referring to Ron Price in Victoria and Douglas Stewart, Gaglardi's former campaign chairman, in the Kamloops office.

'NOT A FRONT'

"We need an organization to find jobs for people, but it should be the department of labor, not a Socred front alliance."

Berger also slammed Gaglardi, calling him a "discredited minister whose major claim to fame is his ability to look after his political friends."

Gaglardi and Premier W. A. C. Bennett denied Monday there was any patronage involved in the appointments thus far.

Gets Record Slow Delivery

MOUNT FOREST, Ont. (CP) —A long-awaited package arrived Monday from Windsor, Ont., for car dealer Charles Cadwell. He had ordered it from Ford Motor Co. in 1949.

The contents, window weatherstripping for a car of early 1940s vintage, isn't much use now because he has gone through several cars since then, he said.

The outside labels were rotted so he couldn't say when the package left Windsor, but Mr. Cadwell thinks the delivery speed — 20 years to come 200 miles — may be some kind of record.

VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, JUNE 17, 1969 —PAGE 19 ★★★

Arthur Mayse

The house on its narrow lot would win no beauty prizes. Its roof peaks sharply at the front over its two stories, then ducks to a lower ridge toward the rear. But it stands sturdily with its basement rooted in the disputed earth of its Rose Street niche, and its simulated brick outer covering helps insulate its walls.

I called on Monday morning. Miss Janet Telfer came around from the rear while I was still fumbling with the old-fashioned gate latch. Her face looked puffy, as if she had been crying.

No, she told me, she was sorry, but it would be impossible to talk with her mother, Mrs. Catherine S. Telfer. She had a heart condition, and any mention of expropriation distressed her so much that the two had agreed to avoid all possible discussion of their plight.

At this point, Mrs. Telfer came to stand in the doorway. As you know, she is a widow in her ninety-first year. She looked out for a moment, then took her white hair and her thin white face indoors.

Her daughter, 61 years old herself, mentioned cataracts. "She doesn't see properly," she said, her tone worried-apologetic.

The property that they still determinedly regard as home has been the object of a legalized snatch. It has been taken over for eventual resale by their city to commercial interests.

★

If you look on such a high-handed act as barely distinguishable from banditry, let me remind you again that it has the sanction of city law. Further, expropriation is no respecter of persons.

If you live in an area that may one day be judged better-suited to profit-making commercial use than to residential occupancy, it could happen to you.

That's what's been happening in the Rose-Blanshard. That's what happened to the woman in the doorway and her daughter, telling their troubles by the gate that couldn't keep trouble out.

Miss Janet Telfer claims harassment. She says that she was warned earlier in her unwanted dealings with Victoria's city government against attempting to sell the place.

"I was told if my mother did so," she said, "the result could be a spell behind bars."

The city, however, has chosen to be generous, according to its lights.

For the present at least, the two women can remain undisturbed in the house.

They are small houses, culled from the real estate multiple listings. William Hooson, assistant to the city manager, supplied me with the addresses. All are occupied now, but as seen from the outside, they did not strike me as a match for the expropriated house on Rose Street.

Miss Telfer and her mother are not rich, but they have a modest income from investment. They have spent a good deal on that place. In demonstration, Miss Telfer fetched out a picture album. It contained color shots of nicely-furnished rooms.

Mother and daughter turned those other houses down.

"We weren't interested," Miss Telfer told me. "What my mother wants to do is live here until she dies."

Lawyer Herbert Matthews has put forward a demand for $50,000 as the widow's price for a home appraised for the city at $10,000. Was the intent to gouge?

No, Janet Telfer said. It was to discourage the city from further offers. Then, perhaps her mother would be permitted to die in what she still considers her home.

The federal government is studying this whole matter of expropriation. I hope one of its decisions will be that no home may be taken over for the benefit of any commercial or industrial concern.

THEY CAN END THE CONFUSION SAYS PROFESSOR

Teachers Called Key to Sex Education

By STEVE HUME

The color slide flicked from an unborn baby to the New York skyline, then switched to a rapid montage of a flower, and embryo, archaic ruins and an old man.

The sequence, flashed on the walls of the University of Victoria's darkened gymntsium, continued for eight quiet minutes.

"We are speaking not only about sex education this morning, but about life in general," Dr. George Szasz told the hushed audience.

He warned that the community, caught in a dilemma over how to instruct its youth in sexual behavior, is ignoring the school teacher while turning to less qualified professionals for advice and assistance.

The Hungarian-born member of the medical faculty at the University of British Columbia was addressing delegates to the 18th convention of the Canadian Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

"The public, in its search for community sex educators, has not turned to its school teachers for help, and has not yet given a clear mandate to its teachers to deal with issues relating to sexuality in the schoolrooms."

He said parents have failed to acknowledge that classrooms are miniature communities where the maleness or femaleness of the teacher is in itself a potent sex educational experience for the students.

"It is a curious paradox that the public is ready to entrust its children for over 25 hours per week to close personal contact with the teacher, yet it does not recognize him as a moulder of the male and female roles of children."

The community has, instead, turned to the clergy, legal and health professionals, and public health agencies, when in actuality they are no more competent to help than most laymen, he said.

"Medical, nursing, social work, clergy or law students have rarely had the chance to study the nature of human sexual behavior, and their experiences with events of human sexuality have been limited to personal experiences and to those shared with them by their friends, clients or patients."

Although "social circumstances have changed over the years, and with them the public moral attitude, official moral codes have not changed appreciably over the last 2,000 years.

"The official institutions of the community have not kept up with currently changing or acceptable human values."

Many parents, however, are realizing that suppression of information about sexual matters does not bring about the happiness it was supposed to create, but they remain confused by offical standards and their own changing values. values.

But he said parents, despite their confusion, still wish to pass onto their children the traditional mores of the social backgrounds, and "sensing a degree of hypocrisy, children do not wish to listen to parents."

"And parents are now unsure of what their children should learn of the moral code, wish that some institution take over and give directions in such matters."

★ ★ ★

The confusion has split the community three ways, he said with three definable attitudes:

● Let The School Do It—those who wish to institutionalize sex education in the school system.

● None of The School's Business—those who feel only the home and the church are fit places for this type of education.

● It's Everyone's Business—those who want courses in school which are relevant to human life and sexuality without being physiology and anatomy lectures.

He said the first two of these groups have negative approaches which would likely be more harmful than anything else.

He said the community should pursue the third path to "raise a new generation of citizen who will be in the possession of as much knowledge of themselves and others so that the emotionalism surrounding sexual aspects of human behaviour can be reduced."

Dr. Szasz proposed courses dealing with physical, social man from conception to death, courses dealing with man and his interaction with the social and natural environment, and still others concerning cultural origins, social institutions, and the sexual behaviors of other peoples and other times.

He said a teacher could function as a resource person willing to discuss events of life as they arise, as a specialist in fields of biology and physiology, and as a "forecaster" concerned with interpreting trends as they emerge in school populations.

Fire Line Action Hot, Heavy As Campfire Permits Cancelled

More than 1,500 B.C. Forest Service and industrial personnel are battling 197 forest fires raging throughout the province today.

In a situation described as "critical" by the forest protection service, all campfire permits in the Vancouver Fire District have been cancelled as of midnight tonight.

The province has also issued an order curtailing lumbering operation to early morning hours when dew provides some safeguards against the fire hazards.

"We are experiencing in mid-June conditions that are normal for the peak danger period in July and August," said a forest protection spokesman.

In the Vancouver district there are 15 fires burning. Throughout most of the province the fire hazrad remains high to extremet he spokesman said.

Men battling the blazes are using water bombers, helicopters, tractors, shovels, but fires are becoming more difficult to contain with many of them leaping the fire guards.

CITY QUITS PLAYING IT COOL

"The temperature at the airport is indicative of the situation throughout the whole Saanich peninsula," McQuarrie said.

The Gonzales reading really only applies to areas lying close to the water, as it is influenced by south-westerly and south-easterly winds coming off Georgia Straits.

Victorians can expect more of the same hot spell, he said.

Elsewhere on the Island, two heat records fell. Comox noted a new high of 93 Monday. The previous record was 87 in 1958. Nanaimo temperatures rose to 91, two detrees higher than the 1958 record of 89.

On the mainland, six other heat records were broken. Terrace recorded its tenth day running of record-breaking heat, and in Lytton, though records weren't broken, 14 straight days of temperatures over 90 have been noted. Vancouver's high for Monday was 82.

McQuarrie said there was less difference between temperatures recorded at Gonzales and the airport because of the absence of cooling winds along the short, which always included Gonzales.

MURDER HEARING JULY 14-15

A preliminary hearing has tentatively been set for July 14 and 15 in the case of a Colwood man charged with the non-capital murder of his wife.

The body of Catherine Josephine Munning, 36, was brought to the Colwood RCMP office June 2. Police said, her death was apparently caused by carbon monoxide poisoning.

Ask The Times

Q. What is the world's record, and what is the Australian record for the number of sheep shorn in a normal working day? —P.D.R.

A. The world's record is held by Colin Bosher, 32, who machine-sheared 565 second-shear Romney and Perendale ewes in eight hours, 53 minutes at Awakino, North Island, New Zealand, on April 13, 1964. The Australian record is held by Kevin Baar, who machine-sheared 327 Merinos in Victoria in seven hours, 40 minutes in 1957. Australian trade commission officials report that a shearer who tops 300 is called a dreadnought, one who consistently passes 200 is a gun, and one who shears the most at any one time is a ringer.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Because School Is Boring Hookey Is Understandable . . .

Part of the blame for absenteeism from schools lies with the length and tedium of the school year, school superintendent Joseph Chell told a meeting of the Greater Victoria school board Monday.

"I think a lot of the reasons behind absenteeism and truancy are that these kids could do the job in half the time if we'd only let them.

"I think in education we've just about reached the point where we can no longer afford to give 200 days a year to each student."

Chell's remarks came in his final report as superintendent to the board. A. J. Longmore will take over superintendent duties in July.

He cautioned trustees to avoid getting bogged down in trivial matters, but to concentrate on education policy.

. . . And So Are Those Tearful Graduations

It's gimmicky and a waste of money and it's put on every year because parents want it.

It also brings a lump to your throat.

School board chairman Dr. C. B. Jameson asked the trustees what they thought of holding the recognition ceremonies in the afternoon to somehow cut down on the cost and glamor of the affairs.

"Getting out high school may mean a lot when you're 18 or 19," he said, "but it probably doesn't mean as much a year later.

★ ★ ★

Trustee Peter Bunn said every year a greater number of students do not bother to take part in the recognition ceremonies.

"I think the parents want it more than the students.

"I think it's just a gimmicky thing that makes the haberdashers and the photographers rich."

Dr. Victor Rogers said when he attended school in England the only recognition he got was a letter in the mail.

"I would love to have had something like this, but I didn't."

John Porteous said it was a moving experience to see young men and women dressed in formal attire.

"You get kind of a lump in your throat when you see these young people. Most students can afford to chip in a few dollars to buy a graduation suit."

C. C. Wyatt said there was "standing room only" at a grad ceremony he attended a few weeks ago at a local high school.

Superintendent Joseph Chell ended the discussion by reminding the trustees graduation is a matter decided by individual schools, and cannot be influenced by the school board.

Policing Sought For Pubs

Oak Bay Group Protests Rowdiness At Beach Hotel

By SUSAN RILEY

The Oak Bay Beach Hotel's neighbors, concerned about noise and unpleasant behavior in the hotel's parking lot, have suggested supervision of all liquor outlet parking lots in British Columbia.

A brief, signed by 31 residents of Beach Drive and the Satellite Apartments, was presented by Mrs. A. H. Bindon, 2747 Satellite, in Victoria Law Courts this morning, to the B.C. commission investigating liquor laws.

The liquor commission hearings are in their second and final day here.

Mrs. Bindon complained that noisy cars leaving the hotel parking lot between 1 a.m. and 1:30 a.m. were keeping neighbors up.

"We'd like to request employees leave as soon as possible after the bar closes and park their cars a distance away," she said.

URINATING OUTDOORS

She also complained of Snug patrons urinating in the parking lot.

Appeals to owners of the lounge brought no action, she said.

She invited the three-man commission, consisting of Judge C. W. Morrow, Most Rev. Martin Johnson and Teamster's union executive Ed Lawson, to her home some night to see the situation for themselves.

"It wouldn't be a dinner party though. The fun and games don't begin until after 10:30 p.m."

She says the group does not feel they can change the hours of operation of the bar—although they would like it to close at midnight Friday and Saturdays and at 11:30 other nights—but she asked the commission to look closely at liscensing bars in residential areas in the future.

"We shouldn't have to accept this noise in a residential area," she said.

She also complained about the windows of the Snug, a lounge in the hotel, being left open in the summer and asked if some other form of air-conditioning could not be found.

She said noise at night is "terrific" and called excessive noise "another form of pollution."

Lawson asked why owners of the co-operative apartment building had moved there in the first place since the hotel was built about 12 years before the apartment.

She said when she moved in the Snug was a quiet, charming place and the parking lot was a large garden. There was little noise or disturbance.

A MISNOMER

Judge Morrow said he could remember the Snug in the 50s when it was a "glorified living room" and "so quiet you could hear a pin drop."

He said it resembles more a cocktail lounge now and suggested that "it's still called the Snug but that may be a misnomer."

Norman Wright, president of the University of Victoria's Alma Mater Society, criticized the principle of legislation which treats alcohol as immoral instead of treating it as any other substance covered in Food and Drug Act.

In a brief prepared for presentation today he said the prohibition of liquor ads in student publications is a denial of freedom of the press.

Hospital List 'Acceptable'

Priorities for spending $9.3 million on 600 extended care hospital beds in the Greater Victoria area have been "approved in principle" by the British Columbia Hospital Insurance Services.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said from Vancouver this morning there are some minor technical points to iron out but that "all the major proposals are acceptable to me."

On Oct. 26, 1968, owner electors in Greater Victoria solidly supported a multi-million rerefendum for construction of extended care beds in the area.

"Early this year BCHIS approved a 200-bed extension for the Gorge Road Hospital and 20 beds at Lady Minto, Ganges. The balance of the priorities went to the BCHIS May 15 after a sometimes bitter debate at the regional level regarding bed siting.

The Victoria board has been recommending in good fashion," by said Loffmark. "Full authorization to construct the beds will handed down by the fall."

PESSIMISTIC

Loffmark said the fall was the target date for a second referendum pertaining to acute care beds. It could be for in excess of $20 million.

Loffmark said hospital authorities in Vancouver were unduly pessimistic if they believed the government will veto or revamp a list of priorities for $51 million in hospital construction.

A nine-man advisory board to the Greater Vancouver Regional Hospital District has threatened to resign if a list of priorities they have drawn up is found unacceptable.

Dr. Harry L. Purdy, chairman of the advisory board feels there has been undue delay on the part of the province in reaching a decision on Vancouver priorities.

Loffmark said the red tape of the past has been cut to a large degree with the establishment of fiscal targets and architectural standards.

He said a cost control group with the primary duty of establishing quick and easy communications between regional board and his department will be announced soon.

Hovercraft Starts Here Still In Dark

Pacific Hovercraft will start service between Vancouver and Victoria later this year.

But it has not decided exactly when the service will start, said a company official.

He was commenting on a Canadian Press report that this service will begin in July, terminating at an undisclosed base in Victoria.

"We are hoping to have this service in July but we can't be definite," the official said.

He confirmed that Sidney is the proposed terminal here. In Vancouver it will be in the downtown area.

Asked where in Sidney the hovercraft will land, the official said "I think possibly the same as in the Air Canada strike, up on the beach. But this terribly tentative."

Pacific Hovercraft announced this morning it will enter Arctic service under charter to the federal mines department this month supplying bases on ice flows. It will use an SRN-6 craft which can carry 17,000 pounds, or 33 passengers.

LIFEGUARDS GO ON DAILY DUTY

Lifeguards will be posted daily at Elk and Beaver Lakes in Saanich until the end of the month, when regular daily lifeguard protection was to start, it was announced Monday.

Ald. William Noel, chairman of the municipal parks and recreation committee, said the decision stems from the increased usage of the swimming areas in the current hot weather.

Lifeguards will be at their stations from midday until 8 p.m. Previously they were there only on weekends.

Creek Cleanup Starts Thursday

The great Colquitz Creek cleanup will start this Thursday night.

With some supervision from Saanich officials, a group headed by Joe Pilot will work in the area from Interurban Road to the Trans-Canada Highway.

The work will continue Friday evening, all day Saturday, and on Sunday there will be what was described as a "general gathering."

Pilot has described the work as a community project and he has been touch with various groups for volunteers. He is a member of a group called House of Universal Brotherhood, a non-religious and non-political organization which involves itself in projects "beneficial to the community."

Participants will have to provide their own hand tools and Saanich has said it will accept no responsibility for accidents.

"In a project such as this, it is difficult to guarantee what will happen in terms of good work, how much will be done," Acting Mayor Leslie Passmore told Saanich council Monday night.

"It is strictly volunteer work. Joe mentions thousands of helpers. I think he is over zealous."

Ald. William Noel told council that the St. John Ambulance will be in attendance.

By SUSAN MAYSE

Victoria gardeners are choosing simple and uncluttered arrangements this year, according to Robert and Jean Dodd.

"Last year everyone was putting in Japanese gardens, with lanterns or pagodas. But this year they seem to be returning to very simple settings — and I think people are becoming more patio-conscious," said Mrs. Dodd.

The birdbath, too, has made a return to favor this year, they said, along with concrete planters.

FROGS AND TOADS

But probably the biggest all-time favorite, Dodd said, is the store's selection of frogs, toads and dwarfs.

These and other animals, — squirrels, deer, dogs — are popular year after year, he said, and his Studio of Decorative Arts stocks four or five shapes and sizes of each.

Classical-looking concrete benches can be bought with or without the seat, leaving room for imagination, and the tops and bottoms of several of his birdbaths and fountain pieces are interchangeable.

The use of garden supplies from the shop doesn't seem to be limited to gardens though, Dodd said.

"You'll find ornaments being used as doorstops or just for decoration in houses all over town," he said.

CLASSICAL WORKS

All but the imported pieces Dodd casts himself in the yard behind the store. Some of the molds he made himself from statues, others are produced for the use of small shops like his by firms in the United States.

Several classical works are reproduced by his casts, among them a group, the Three Graces, and a bust of Diana.

Most items are available painted or natural, and custom painting can be easily arranged, since Jean Dodd paints them herself with an artist's spray brush.
